FOREWORD

More than forty years ago, Walter Hodge Bunn, a lawyer of New York, began making researches for the discovery of his ancestry, and descendants of the same. In this he was aided by his brother, Rev. Albert Carrier Bunn, a returned Chinese missionary and Episcopal rector. Walter Hodge Bunn gave freely of his time and means, to his own disadvantage, in the effort to complete the genealogy. In the meantime, Charles Newton French of Chicago, who believed the line in which he is interested (descendants of Benjamin Bunn of Middlesex County, New Jersey) came from Virginia, had devoted much time and money to search in that direction; the records of more than one hundred counties were examined, as were also tombstones, libraries were searched and many years of correspondence maintained; the matter thus gathered was turned over to Walter Hodge Bunn; this led to further search, and the results are embodied in this book. After the latter had devoted 29 years to the undertaking, old age and the lack of proper support compelled him to abandon further effort. His manuscript was, however, preserved by a son, and, in the year 1924, it came into the hands of Romanzo Norton Bunn, of Chicago, for additions if possible, and in due time, publication. Norman Clay Gray, a genealogist of Chicago, was employed to carry forward this work; he devoted much time to library research, visited the territory where the northern Bunns were most numerous, and added much to the data in hand by correspondence; he was called from earth 8 October 1926, before the completion of his plans. His successor, James Alfred Ellis, in his turn, accumulated considerable matter of human interest; much time and money have been expended in adding facts concerning the activities and character of individuals named; much more of this might have been obtained if locations were known to the editor, who owes much to the labors of Mr. Gray; some lack may be attributed, also, to indifference, suspicion and negligence of people addressed in the search for information. Many members of the family have made investigations and contributed freely of information and financial support of the enterprise; perhaps the most conspicuous of these is Paul Vernon Bunn of Ilion, New York, who conducted correspondence with near and remote relatives in the hope of furthering interest in the matter. The completeness of the history of those members of the family located in Otsego County, New York, and their descendants may be attributed, chiefly to the patient and industrious search of Romanzo Norton Bunn; his personal contact with many of the name did much to arouse interest and a co-operative spirit. The whole is submitted in the hope that others may continue the search.

THE EDITOR.

DIRECTIONS FOR TRACING ANCESTRY

Under the plan of arrangement in this book, this is a very simple matter.

In tracing any unknown line of ancestry, one must begin with the present and work backward. Begin with your father or any known forebear; note his location by the index; there you will find a number; this number occurs twice, first at the left of the line, where he is listed among his father's children and, second in the center of the page in black type, as heading of a paragraph; in this latter place, you will find his history.

Now, having located an individual among his father's children you will find the history of his father in the paragraph above; there you find the number of the father; turn back to where that number appears on the left side of the page, among his father's children, and you find the number of the father, as before. This course continued, will take you to the first known ancestor. If you make note of these numbers as you go along, you will have the line in shape to read forward from the beginning.

Every individual is a paradox, because he inherits from the multitude of ancestors who come into the line by intermarriages, most contradictory qualities, and will appear, at different times to act from contradictory motives. The study of the influence of inheritance and environment is most interesting; so the history of our ancestors becomes very absorbing to the enquiring and intelligent mind.

"With charity for all and malice toward none," let us "give honor to whom honor is due."

The name appears in England long before surnames existed there, except among landholders. The name as imported from Germany was, probably, in the form von Bonn (from Bonn), which was quickly rendered Bunne by the English, just as Bohn became Bunn elsewhere. It is found chiefly in the southeastern Counties of England—Norfolk, Suffolk, Middlesex, Essex and Kent. Richard Bunn, the elder, appears as a tenant of Cliffware Manor, County Suffolk, 28 January 1274, paying a rental of two pence per acre per annum. Richard Bunn, the younger, of the hamlet of Burrstall, County Suffolk, granted land to another, dated Sunday after Epiphany (January, 1318,) 11th year of Edward II. Mention of John Bunne of Almaine, Germany, "Long since came into England, and has faithfully exercised the trade of saddler in the City of London", and under protection of the Crown, is dated at Westminster 8 January 1378. These records were made in the period when it was "the fashion" to add a final "e" to any word which could receive it. In later years, the name seems to have appeared in its present form.

Many names in common use in America today have undergone modifications and variations in comparatively recent years in England and America. The origin of those of the remote past is, largely, a matter of speculation. Apparently, the name Bunn came into use as a surname in Germany, whence it drifted down the Rhine into Holland and across the North Sea to England. Before the invention of railroads, the rivers and sea furnished the principal highways of the World, and the numerous wars waged led to migrations among civilians, as well as warriors, all of which makes a definite location or origin of a name difficult. Of this, we are quite certain—those bearing the name of Bunn have been good citizens, industriously plying their various vocations and attending to their own affairs, rather than those of their neighbors.

The patent rolls of England show that John Bunn was living in County Kent 20 May 1486. The estate of Thomas Bunne was in the hands of executors at Westminster 11 October 1409. The German origin of the name is indicated by a mandate dated at Westminster 18 April 1436, concerning the residence of foreigners in the Kingdom, on taking the oath of Fealty. This mentions Herman Bunne, born in the Bishopric of Cologne, probably at Bonn, residing in Southwark, County Surrey, cordwainer (shoemaker); also, Gödfrey Bunne of Bunne, born in Almaine, Germany, now dwelling in the Parish of St. Sepulctore, London. Henry Bunn, husbandman, was a resident of Hoo, County Norfolk, 22 October 1448. Richard Bunne was among those commissioned to buy grain for the King's stores in 1461. John Bunne was one of the Justices for the Town of Cambridge in 1461, 1464 and 1465. Wills made at Hemel-Hempstead, Co. Herts; Bursall, Ipswich; Hintlesham, Ipswich; and others, show the presence of the name in England. Further records of conveyances, wills and probates bring the presence of the name in various parts of England down to 1800, beyond which date search was not continued. A large amount of material has been gathered. In the searches prosecuted for this work, discovery has been made of recent immigrations from England. Some of these will be traced to some extent in this volume.

BUNNS OF NEW JERSEY

There is evidence of record, beside every sort of correlative evidence, that all of the name in New Jersey are descended from Matthew Bunn, the settler at Woodbridge, New Jersey, in 1670. It is apparent that some of this family were affiliated with the Quakers, as the Friends' records of Kingman, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, show removals of members named Bunn from Woodbridge to Kingman.

The striking resemblance in both mental and physical characteristics prevailing among the Bunns of America, as traced in this work, stamps them as of one blood. All deeds and wills recorded in New Jersey prior to the year 1800 are to be found in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton. In only two cases has a complete line in the family of Bunn been established by these records. The absence of any vital records in early New Jersey annals, and the absence or loss of early Church records seems to have destroyed all hope of complete account of some branches of this family. However, attendant circumstances and conditions, established beyond any reasonable doubt, their common origin, and we proceed with confidence with such records as have been preserved. There were several marriages, in New Jersey and New York, between Bunn men and Dutch women. The traditions of early life related by these women have been associated with the Bunns, giving rise to a somewhat persistent idea that the Bunn family is of Dutch origin. A most rigid search by different investigators fails to produce any evidence that such is the fact. A residence of one branch of the family among the Dutch of the Mohawk Valley lent some color to this erroneous tradition, but the probate and land records fail to show the name previous to known family records, and traditions bring them from Hunterdon County, New Jersey, to Tryon (now Montgomery) County, New York.

There were, at least, two pioneer immigrants in America by the name of Bunn. The earliest located in Virginia, whence his descendants removed to North Carolina, spreading thence farther west to Arkansas, Texas and beyond. They will receive further mention elsewhere in this work.

BUNN FAMILY1

Edward Bunn of Massachusetts was the founder of this family in America. His descendants are widely distributed through that State and others in New England, and like those of most New England families, have been pioneers in many States of the American Union. The first American record of him is found at Nantasket (now the Town of Hull) in 1642, when his right as a proprietor was acknowledged. In 1662, 30th of October he made a deposition giving his age as 50 years, indicating that he was born in 1612 and there can be no doubt that he was a native of England.

"Edward Bunn, aged 50 years or thereabouts, and Thomas Collier, aged 40 years or thereabouts, do testify that ever since we came to Nantasket to dwell we have possessed Brewster Islands by virtue of the grant of the General Court, without any legal molestation of any kind, and in this manner", etc. His second marriage is shown by Boston records, as follows: "Edward Bunn of Hull, Massachusetts, widower, married to Elizabeth Mason June 20, 1657," He must have had a wife in England, who was the mother of his children. Only two of these are on record, namely Matthew of further mention and Elizabeth, who married at Boston, in October, 1673, Joseph Howe of that city. Edward Bunn's will was dated 14 October 1673, and it is probable that his death occurred soon after. It is possible that Matthew Bunn was a brother of Edward Buun, but more probably he was a son.

Matthew Bunn and wife, Esther, were living in Boston June 9, 1659, when the birth of a son, Matthew, was recorded. He was a mariner, and there is reason to believe that he was a Quaker. It is well known that the Puritan settlers of early New England gave scant courtesy to members of the Society of Friends, and it is well known to genealogists that records of mariners' families are often defective, perhaps, through long absences from home or frequent change of residence. Two other children of Matthew are recorded in Boston, namely: Nathaniel, born 23 March 1664, and Esther, 2 March 1665. Several others of the name appear in Woodbridge, New Jersey, who were, undoubtedly, children of Matthew and Esther. The father was a mariner and it is not unlikely that some of his children were born on shipboard and were, carelessly, unrecorded at any port, or were born at other places than Boston. It is probable that he became acquainted with the land about New York City through voyages made to that port. At any rate, he decided to settle at Woodbridge, New Jersey, just west of Staten Island. On 30 December 1670, he received several grants in that town, where he was described as "mariner" of Boston. These grants included a house lot of eleven acres; 120 acres of upland on Raritan river; 25 acres on Raritan meadow; another tract of five acres in same; and four acres of meadow on Papiack creek. These locations indicate that the lands are in the present town of Raritan, then part of Woodbridge. Matthew Bunn was dead as early as 1680. On 8 May 1696, his son Matthew deeded to the latter's mother Esther the original houselot of eleven acres and another tract of eight acres, in lieu of dower right.

Nathaniel Bunn, the second recorded son of Matthew and Esther, was apprenticed at the age of sixteen years to Barnerd Filder, a potter of Woodbridge, 1 May 1680. In this document, his mother Ester is referred to as "widow," thus showing that Matthew Bunn, senior was dead at that time. Esther Bunn, the recorded daughter, was married at Woodbridge 29 June 1689 to Thomas Pike, and was the mother of three children. Contemporary with these children of Matthew and Esther, were Hannah, Peter, James, William and Miles Bunn, all of whom were, undoubtedly, children of Matthew and Esther. James died in early manhood. Matthew Bunn, junior, had a wife Sarah, and resided in Woodbridge, where he and Miles were witnesses of the will of John Allen of Woodbridge 28, January 1703. Owing to the absence of vital records in New Jersey, it is very difficult to trace people through that means. The editor is informed by one of the best authorities in that State that scarcely one deed in five was recorded, and wills are still more rarely of record.

Miles Bunn, son of Matthew and Esther, lived in Woodbridge until 1721, and is next heard of in West Jersey in 1735, when he held "Society's lands," under lease. The records of Woodbridge give the baptismal name of his wife as Mary and show the births of seven children, namely: Eunice, born 20 November, 1703; Mary 17 November 1705; Sarah, 4 June 1709; Rhoda 4 August 1712; Miles 23 November 1713; Nathaniel 13 February 1715; William 14 June 1721. It is quite possible that other children were born after the removal to West Jersey. Several authorities have been engaged in search for traces of this family, in vain. In view of the tradition that John Bunn went from Hunterdon County, New Jersey, to Montgomery County, New York, and several confirmatory circumstances, we are forced to the conclusion that he was a son of Miles Bunn or one of his brothers, and will proceed on that assumption.

Another view of the Bunn Homestead, showing the front porch and the two chimneys. The house is a two-story structure with a gabled roof. The porch is located on the right side of the house. The house is surrounded by a fence and a lawn. The background shows some trees and a clear sky.

Among the sons of Matthew Bunn of Woodbridge, New Jersey was William Bunn, born, probably, about 1672 in Woodbridge. His will, made in 1730, names children. The will of his wife, Sarah Langstaff, mentions the same children, namely:

- i Joseph Bunn, mentioned in records of Burlington County, New Jersey, 17 August 1752
- ii Micajah Bunn, witnessed a will in 1748 at Woodbridge
- 6 iii Joshua Bunn, will 1775
- 7 iv Sarajah Bunn, will 1775
- v Ruben Bunn, married 18 June 1744 Rachel Place, at Woodbridge, New Jersey
- vi Lois Bunn
- vii Hannah Bunn
- viii Jean Bunn, last three under age when the father made his will in 1730

William Bunn, the father, witnessed wills at Woodbridge in 1706 and 1721, and was one of a committee to inventory the personal estate of John Robinson of Middlesex County, 25 April 1705.

Joshua Bunn, third son of William Bunn, born 1712, lived near Pennington, New Jersey, died 12 March 1775. His first wife was a Miss Waters; he married (2) Susannah Allen, mentioned in his will, dated 1775. Susannah Allen was a daughter of John Allen and Deliverance Potter. In a comparatively recent issue of the "Trenton State Gazette," is printed this interesting traditional account of the residence of Joshua Bunn:

"A HOUSE OF HISTORY"

About one mile North of Pennington, there now stands a relic of the century preceding the last, a farm house occupied as the residence of Samuel Bunn. The house is built after a curious style of architecture with thick mud walls, low sloping roof and a spacious chimney. It has been in continued possession of the Bunn family for nearly one hundred and fifty years.

One of them, Joshua Bunn purchased the property in question, of Powell Hoff in March, 1738, during the reign of George II of England. The deed written in the strange chirography of that time is an interesting document. At his demise his son Jonathan Bunn became the owner.

During the Revolutionary War the house and farm were twice occupied by the British Army as their headquarters. All one winter, Mr. Bunn was obliged to cart wood for the soldiers to burn, in order to save his fence rails from their camp fires. He was once arrested and taken before Lord Cornwallis at Pennington, it having become known that he had been a soldier in the American Army, but he escaped imprisonment by a fortunate accident. They still have several souvenirs of the visits of the red-coats; among which are a ferule and a rolling pin made by one of the Officers, and a cannon ball.

Many other old relics can be seen, some stowed away carelessly in the attic, and others in use, the most interesting of which are a cradle that came from Holland, and a table from Germany. A small trunk neatly veneered with buckwheat straw, is one hundred and twenty years old, and was made by Jonathan Bunn's wife in her girlhood. Spinning wheels, a foot stove, and an old rusty sword are also interesting sights of this curio shop. The old back log fire-place would make a comfortable room, and the chimney looks as though it were meant to welcome Santa Claus, with his well filled pack."

Joshua Bunn's children were:

- 8 i Jonathan, born 1744
- ii William Bunn, was a trader in the West Indies, and died in Nova Scotia
- iii Joseph Bunn, went to "The Lake Country," New

- York, but returned and died at Pennington iv Deborah Bunn, married a Temple and went to northern part of New Jersey
v Nathaniel Bunn, died young

7

Sarajah Bunn, mentions wife Hannah in will, also names Reuben as his youngest son. Other sons were Thomas and Sarajah.

- i Thomas Bunn, married 31 August 1773 at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, Elizabeth Griggs
10 ii Sarajah Bunn, born 1738, enlisted at Philadelphia in the military forces, 13 May 1758; described as "20 years old, from East Jersey, five fut 7 inches tall, ruddy complexion and fair, short black hair, born in East Jersey, a mason by trade." Enrolled by Captain John Bull

8

Jonathan Bunn, eldest child of Joshua Bunn, born 28 January 1744, was prominent in business and religious life at Pennington, New Jersey, where he resided on the homestead inherited. He served as a private of the Revolutionary army, first in Captain Henry Phillips' company, First Hunterdon County regiment, 1776-77; later in Captain William Tucker's company same regiment, Colonel Isaac Smith. Early in life he united with the Presbyterian Church, but later joined the Methodist order and served as steward, class leader and exhorter, one of its most ardent and influential members. Many eminent divines of the early Church preached and were entertained at his house. He died 3 January 1815. He married 3 June 1776 Mary Shinn of Pennington, born 22 May 1757, died 12 November 1834. Children:

- 11 i Lydia, born 1781
12 ii Joshua, born 1783
13 iii Mary, born 1788
iv Sarah, born 1790, married Samuel Fidler; no issue
14 v Jonathan, born 1792

- vi Deborah, born 1796, married John C. Bellerjean; no issue
- 15 vii Joseph, born 1798
- 16 viii Nathaniel, born 1800

10

Sarajah Bunn, born 1738, enlisted in 1758 in the militia service of Pennsylvania. According to the description at this time, he was born in East Jersey, and was, undoubtedly, a son of Sarajah Bunn of Woodbridge, who was a grandson of Matthew Bunn, the Woodbridge settler from Boston (see No. 2). Sarajah Bunn was a mason by trade, was five feet and seven inches in height, of ruddy complexion, with black hair. No record of his marriage has been found, but he is presumed to have been the father of:

- 39 i Sarajah Bunn, died 1848-50

11

Lydia Bunn, eldest child of Jonathan and Mary (Shinn) Bunn, was born 27 September 1781, at Pennington, died 28 November 1872; married Richard Primmer, born 13 April 1778, died 13 August 1858. Children:

- i Jonathan Primmer, born 1803, died 1831, unmarried
- ii Mary Ann Primmer, born 14 August 1805, died 12 May 1883; married Joseph Waters, born 5 June 1805, died 25 June 1870
- iii Susanna Primmer, born 13 November 1808, married Andrew Humphreys, died May 1880
- iv John Wesley Primmer, born 4 August 1810, married Emily Ryall, died about 1860
- v Joshua Primmer, born 1813, died 1903; married Mary Serviss; no issue
- vi Fannie Bunn Primmer, born 16 August 1815, died 16 January 1902; married George Simmons, born 27 May 1807 died 16 May 1884
- vii Hannah Primmer, born 17 December 1818, died 11 August 1908; married (1) 1 October 1839 Elijah Smith Hunt; (2) 18 January 1849 Joshua Baldwin, born 17 August 1817, died 1 March 1819

Joshua Bunn, eldest son of Jonathan and Mary (Shinn) Bunn, born 17 September 1783, died 1859; married 1 January 1809 Frances Hoff. He was prominent in the vicinity of Trenton, where he resided, as a local preacher and justice of the peace. Children:

- i Sarah Ann Bunn, born 12 March 1818, died 5 December 1906; married 1 April 1840 Rev. Crook Stevenson Van Cleve, born 30 December 1816, died 3 March 1890; children had no issue
- 17 ii Mary Bunn, born 3 August 1823, died 11 January 1905; married 6 March 1850 Charles Wesley Bateman, son of Israel and Susan Bateman, born 5 April 1824, died 21 June 1894

Mary Bunn, lovingly known as "Aunt Polly," born 14 February 1788, married 1 October 1806 Edward Hunt Cornell (Uncle Hunt), born 2 April 1788. Children:

- i Aaron Cornell, born 11 March 1810 at Harbourton, New Jersey
- ii Sarah E. Cornell, born 30 June 1812; married April 1831 John Primmer
- ii John Cornell, born 15 December 1815, died 23 October 1874; married 25 October 1840 Eleanor Hunt Cook, born 11 February 1815, died 17 July 1890

14

Jonathan Bunn, born 18 November 1792, died 17 June 1870; married 12 December 1818 Ann Conlon, born 10 October 1795, died 11 July 1884. Children:

27-D

Henry Conrad Bunn, son of Joseph C. Bunn, was born 12 September 1870 at Pennington, and was graduated from Pennington Seminary; at the age of 16, in 1886, he entered the employ of the Trenton Banking Company, and left in 1893. In October 1899 was employed as bookkeeper at Princeton University, and was appointed assistant treasurer in 1902; was appointed curator of grounds and buildings in 1904, also treasurer of University Power Company and treasurer of University Dining Halls. In 1910 he resigned these positions and engaged with the Andorra Nurseries of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia; later became interested in Cuba and the Isle of Pines, as treasurer of the Andorra and Whitney Land Companies. Because of failing health, was compelled to abandon this work. He was recently the victim of an automobile accident, which injured his eyesight, but is recovering slowly from his injuries. He is much interested in the successful completion of the Bunn Genealogy, and has carried on correspondence with those who seem reluctant to give information, and otherwise shown a practical spirit of co-operation. He married 26 June 1903 Jane Carson Wells, who was born 13 October 1880 and left no issue; he married (2) 12 March 1928 at Atlantic City, New Jersey, Evalyn A. Spanogle of that city, a native of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, whose ancestors came from France with La Fayette; she is a member of the Dames of the Loyal Legion. Mr. Bunn has been active in the militia service of New Jersey. He became a private in Company A, 7th Regiment, 10 May 1894; discharged 1 April 1896; became a private in Company L, 2d regiment 7 September 1900; promoted first lieutenant 14 September 1900; private Company I, 3d Regiment, N. 32

Charles Heisler Bateman, born 2 July 1861, in Pennington, New Jersey, has long been active in the newspaper business in New Jersey. His grandfather, Israel Bateman, lived in Pennington; married 20 May 1820 Susan Bray. Her father, Gen. Daniel Bray, gathered at Lambertville the fleet of boats with which Washington and his forces crossed the Delaware river to attack the Hessians at the battle of Trenton.

Charles Wesley Bateman, eldest child of Israel and Susan, was a farmer in Pennington, an active member of the Methodist Church and 12 years superintendent of its Sunday School at Pennington. He was a lifelong Republican, but never sought or accepted office; married 6 March 1850 Mary Bunn, daughter of Joshua and Frances (Hoff) Bunn of Pennington (see No. 12).

Charles Heisler Bateman, only son of Charles W. and Mary (Bunn) Bateman, attended the public schools and Pennington Seminary, from which he graduated in 1880. He then entered the class of 1885 of Princeton University. He began his newspaper career as reporter on the "State Gazette and Times" of Trenton; was four years city editor of the Trenton "True American." From 1887 to 1908 he was legislative correspondent and political writer; during that period he represented the New York "Evening Post," Philadelphia "Evening Telegram," Paterson "Press," Trenton "True American" and the Associated Press. In 1891 he became editor and part owner of the Somerville "Unionist-Gazette," and is now manager of the Unionist-Gazette Association, which carries on a very extensive printing and publishing plant. Mr. Bateman is a director of the Somerville Dime Savings bank, has served more than ten years as a member of the Somerville board of education, and was twice private secretary to the president of the State Senate. He is a member of the Second Reformed Church of Somerville. Richard Bunn, born 10 July 1800 in Herkimer County, New York, settled in the town of Volney, Oswego County, same State, when it was a wilderness. He was a shoemaker and farmer, an active member and class leader of the Methodist Church, an Abolitionist and strong supporter of political prohibition. His farm of 96 acres was devoted to dairy and general farming. Beside having the trade of shoemaker, he was also a carpenter. The following obituary notice, taken from an Oswego County newspaper, shows the esteem in which he was held:

Bunn—In Volney, Friday, September 8, Richard-Bunn, aged 71 years.

Deceased was a native of Herkimer county but an early settler in Oswego county, having come here nearly or quite 40 years ago. At that time the part of Volney into which he went was a complete wilderness. Having settled, however, he with the help of a growing family of sons, cleared for himself a farm on or near which he resided up to the time of his death. His characteristics, induced in part doubtless from the habits of pioneer life, were modesty, perfect integrity, and dislike of display in every form. He was for many years a professing, and consistent Christian, and ever preferred to be known by his works. On his death-bed he requested that at his funeral he should not be eulogized, but that his memory remain such as his life made it. He had retained his full strength and vigor up to an old age, but for a few years previous to his death had been unwell. His death was the result of a bad state of the blood. Not only the relatives, but also the neighborhood in which he lived will mourn his death, and the loss of the quiet influence which he ever exerted, always for good, will be painfully felt.

He married (1) 25 December 1824 Margaret Wright, who was born 21 August 1805 in Herkimer County, died 4 April 1848 in Volney. She was a daughter of Isaac Wright and Catherine Blitz, his wife; Richard Bunn married (2) 15 March 1849 Lucinda Hesler, died 3 July 1850; he married (3) Sarah Wood, who died 22 August 1881. Some of his descendants have remarkable musical gifts.

There were nine children of the first wife, and one of the second, namely:

i Edward Webb Bunn, born 6 August 1828, served

- three years in the 81st Regiment, N. Y. State Volunteers, died 25 October 1908; married Mary Harris; no issue
- ii Sarah Bunn, born 10 June 1831, married Gardner Babcock; no issue
 - 41 iii Delos Alonzo Bunn, born 1833
 - iv George W. Bunn, born 11 September 1835, died 17 September 1860
 - v Isaac W. Bunn, born 6 March 1838, killed at the battle of Cold Harbor in the civil war 3 June 1864

41

Delos Alonzo Bunn, born 19 September 1833 in Volney, N. Y., received a common school education, and remained on the paternal farm, which he inherited, by purchase of interest of other heirs; died 23 May, 1895. He was a member of the Methodist Church at Mt. Pleasant, in the town of Volney; a republican. He married (1) 10 February 1878 Mary A. Simpson (2) Phoebe Grant, daughter of Edward and Abigail (Baldwin) Grant; born 2 January 1854. After his death, latter married Parker; she now resides on the Bunn homestead in Volney. Children:

- 328 i George Richard Bunn, born 1872
- ii Mary M. Bunn, born 13 November 1878, is the wife of Grover Hart Goodwin, a farmer at Baldwinsville, New York
- 329 iii Ida Luella Bunn, born 10 December 1880

42

Catherine Elizabeth Bunn, born 18 June 1840 in Volney, married there 3 August 1859,, Menzo

Smith, who was born 14 December 1832 at West Winfield, New York, died 17 June 1906, son of Myron Smith, born 1794, died 1887, and Loraney Wood, born 29 June 1796, died 5 April 1885. Menzo Smith was educated at Richfield Springs and at Cooperstown Seminary, and began teaching at the age of 20 years; from 1860 to 1885 he was a farmer in Oswego, Onondaga and Cayuga Counties, New York, making a specialty of market gardening. He was a modernist and scientist, a man of fine character, honest and moral to a marked degree; a strong Republican, he was guided by a high intelligence, well posted on matters of public interest. His wife, "Kate" Bunn, was educated in a country school, and engaged in teaching three years before her marriage. She died 17 December 1885. Children:

- i Berton Smith, died at the age of two years
- 330-A ii Elon F. Smith, born 20 August 1864 is a dentist residing in Jacksonville, Florida

BUNNS OF NEW YORK AND THE GREAT WEST

John Bunn — 43

John Bunn was the father of a large family, and his descendants have become numerous throughout the United States. Little is known of him beyond these facts. Family tradition says his wife was Elizabeth Baer, and that they went from Hunterdon County, New Jersey, to Montgomery County, New York, where his children were born. Several of his sons located in Otsego County, New York, where descendants are still residing. The date of birth of his first child indicates that he was born about 1725-30, and was married about 1751. Children, all born in Florida, Montgomery County, New York:

- 44 i John, born 1753
- 45 ii Elizabeth, born 1761
- 46 iii Margaret, born 1767
- 47 iv Jacob, born 1770

John Bunn, born 1753, lived near Manny's Corners, in the District of Mohawk, later Town of Caughnawaga, now Town of Amsterdam, where he was a farmer. He was dead 30 November 1813, when letters of administration were issued to his widow, Temperance, by the Surrogate. He married about 1784 Temperance French, who was born 2 May 1767, daughter of Ebenezer and Abigail (Goodspeed) French, died 1814. John Bunn and wife were buried on their farm. Ebenezer and Abigail French were married 30 March 1757, and died, respectively, 26 August 1802 and 1 December 1812. The records show that John "Bun" in 1785 received payment from the State of New York for services in Col. Frederick Fisher's Regiment of Tyron County Militia during the Revolution. Children:

Elizabeth Bunn, eldest daughter of John Bunn and Elizabeth Baer, born 1761, married about 1780 Jonathan Richardson and died February 1825.

Jonathan Richardson, born about 1745-50, may have been the son of Ralph Richardson of Sutton, Massachusetts, who died in 1782. He was a native of Woburn, Massachusetts, a descendant of Samuel Richardson, pioneer settler of that town. Jonathan Richardson was a member of the "Green Mountain Boys," under Colonel Ethan Allen in 1775, was at Quebec in Arnold's expedition 17 February 1776, in Captain Charles Nelson's company, Major Brown's detachment. Later, he was a member of the Third Regiment, under Captain Fred Fisher (later Colonel), Tryon County militia. He lived in Florida, (now) Montgomery County, New York, until about 1793, when he moved to Laurens, Otsego County, same State. Later, lived at Elba, Genessee County, New York. Children:

- i Catherine Richardson, born 26 April 1782; married Nathan Bridges, had 13 children
- ii John Richardson, born 24 July 1784; married Elizabeth Baker, had two children
- iii No record; probably died in infancy
- iv Ebenezer Richardson, born 1789; married Phebe Reed, had seven children
- v William Richardson born 1790 in Florida, was a

- distinguished citizen of Oneonta, New York; married Polly Austin, had ten children
- vi Jacob Richardson, born 11 March 1793; married Mercy Goodrich, had four children
 - vii Peter Richardson, born 25 June 1795 in Laurens; married Permelia Haines, had two children
 - viii Polly Richardson, born 1 August 1797 at Elba, New York; married Elijah Sherman Buck, had eight children
 - ix Martin Richardson, born 29 May 1800; married at Laurens, New York, Candace Comstock, had six children
 - x James Richardson, born 30 September 1803; married (1) Mary Crawford (2) Caroline Chapin, had three children

46

Margaret Bunn, born 1767, was most familiarly known as Peggy. She became the wife of William Kane and lived many years on a farm in the Town of Otsego, Otsego County, New York, known as the "Copperhead Smith Farm." Children:

- 63 i Lydia Ann Kane, married Abram Cooper
- 64 ii Elizabeth (Betsey) Kane
- iii Margaret Kane, married ——— Willsey and lived near Unadilla, New York, at time of marriage
- iv Jacob Kane, died in early manhood
- v William, with Jacob, went to work on Erie canal, and settled in western part of the State, probably in Genessee County
- vi Peter Kane was a farmer and is said to have lived near Snowden, New York

Jacob Bunn, born 1770, was a farmer in the Town of Hartwick, Otsego County, New York. He was industrious and thrifty and became the owner of a fine farm at South Hartwick. A deed on record at Cooperstown shows that he added to his holdings 5 June 1837, when he received deed of $5\frac{1}{4}$ acres on the east side of Otsego creek, and adjoining his own land on the west, bounded north by land of Thomas Johnson. This was a part of Lot 9, Hartwick's Patent. The farm is among the finest in the Otego valley, rising by a gentle slope toward the east, and now embraces 138 acres in possession of Jacob Bunn's gerat-grandson and operated as a dairy farm. Jacob Bunn died 26 January 1850, in his 80th year. His wife Jane Scott, born 1769, died 28 June, 1850. They rest side by side in South Hartwick cemetery. His grandsons became pioneers in the western part of the State and onward to the West and Northwest, to the Pacific Coast. That they were made of the stern material which distinguishes pioneers is demonstrated by their perserverance and hardihood in enduring the privations of frontier life. They were content to make their way by the labor of their own hands, helped in establishing organized government, in setting up the school, the Church, the printing press and all the civilizing and Christianizing influences that paved the way for a happy and prosperous life for their posterity. Children of Jacob and Jane:

- 65 i Margaret, born 1789
- 66 ii John, born 1791
- 67 iii Martha Jane, born 1793
- 68 iv Anna, born 1795
- 69 v Peter, born 1797
- 70 vi Scott, born 1800
- 71 vii Amy, born 1802
- 72 viii William, born 1806

Mary Bunn, third daughter of John and Elizabeth (Baer) Bunn, born October 1773, married 22 April 1788 Samuel Johnston and lived in Herkimer County, New York, where she died 28 May 1857. Samuel Johnston, son of William and Angelina (Braisted) Johnston, born 5 January 1763, died 1 December 1830. At the age of 14 years he enlisted as a drummer boy in the Revolutionary army, and served until June 1780. Two of his brothers also served in the Revolution, namely: William and John Johnston. The former was, successively ensign, lieutenant and captain; enlisted in 1776 at South Amboy, New Jersey, promoted captain 31 August 1781, participated in the battles of Trenton, Brandywine and Monmouth. The latter enlisted in 1777 and served under Captain John Seward (father of William H. Seward), as sergeant and lieutenant, until 1780. William Johnston, the elder, was of Scotch-Irish stock, of ancient Scotch lineage. Before the Revolutionary war the family lived in East Jersey, after the war in Sussex County, West Jersey and, about 1786, moved to New York, with the exception of James Johnston. Samuel and Mary (Bunn) Johnston had children:

- i William Johnston, died in early childhood
- ii Rebecca Johnston, married Horace Stone, lived Afton, New York, left no issue
- 73 iii Christina Johnston, born 1793
- 74 iv Margaret Johnston, born 1796

Lisbon, Otsego County, same State. Until 20 March 1822, he lived on a farm known as the "David Gardner Place," then removed to Union Factory, in the Town of Hartwick, same County, where he continued twenty years. In 1832 he moved to the town of Milford, same County, where he continued another twenty years, first residing in the village of Milford Center, later on a farm in that town. In 1852 he went to the town of Homer, Cortland County, New York, where he died 3 September 1862. Peter Bunn was about of medium height, of compact and well-knit frame with fine face and head, crowned with a wealth of gray hair. He was neat in habits and attire, quiet and selfpossessed in manner and speech, and the unquestioned head of his household. He was well educated for the time in which he lived, was gifted with good judgment and abundant common sense and was thoroughly well read on all public questions. Though not a member of any Church, he sympathized with the religious faith of the Baptist Church, and sustained the principles of the Democratic party in all political matters.

He married (1) at Albany, New York, Elizabeth Edgerton, who lived only about a year and left no issue. He married (2) 15 December 1797, in Florida, Abigail Prentiss, who was born 27 November 1775, and died 14 November 1861, at Homer. She came of a well-known Connecticut family of English origin and was a woman of remarkable powers and character, having a strong, well-disciplined mind and a very pleasant personality. Her education was, apparently, well grounded, and her personal training of her daughters carried them well beyond the limits of the public schools, fitting them for teachers, a vocation in which several of them were remarkably successful. She was a very handsome and amiable woman, with very bright, black eyes and abundance of beautiful black hair. Children: (See Appendix C):

- 83 i Mary M. (Polly) Bunn, born 29 September 1801
- ii Elizabeth Bunn, born 6 January 1803, died 10 March 1866, unmarried

Thomas Bunn was a far-sighted and properous business man; born 16 June 1803 at Amsterdam, his boyhood was passed on the paternal farm, where his parents were buried. For a time he was employed as a building mechanic, and; shortly after his marriage, kept a hotel at Tribes Hill, also serving as postmaster and managing a farm. During his residence there, the first train of cars passed through the Mohawk Valley. For nearly twenty years he continued there and moved January 1, 1844, to Amsterdam, where he had purchased a large stone house (one on whose construction he had labored as a young man) which was his home during the balance of his life. Immediately he became identified with the business interests and growth of Amsterdam, acquired a large landed property and prospered. His keen foresight and sound business judgment foresaw the growth of the city and his connection with banking and other interests gave confidence to others, who collaborated with him in promoting municipal progress. For over thirty years he was a member of the Presbyterian Church, which was prospered through his influence, and in politics sustained the Democratic principles and policy. To his descendants he left an untarnished name and a valuable estate. He married 7 May 1824 Elizabeth Button, who was born 12 April 1803 and died 26 May 1864. He died 21 August 1883, in his 81st year. Children:

Peter Bunn, born 15 August 1797 in South Hartwick, died 6 November 1851 in the Town of Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York (near Elliottville). He was a pioneer in the movement westward from Hartwick, and his sons moved on to the West, one dying at Shaw, Oregon. Peter Bunn was buried in what is known as Maples Cemetery in the Town of Mansfield. He was a faithful member of the Methodist Church, sustained by a simple faith in the Divine will and a happy Hereafter. He married 1 January 1823 Polly Ann Jackson, born 1 January 1802, daughter of Aaron and Anna (Treadwell) Jackson. She died 27 May 1872 at the home of her eldest son, at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, and was buried in Centreville Cemetery, in that Town.

The Jackson family is an old one in Fairfield County, Connecticut, active in the settlement. Henry Jackson came from England in the ship "Elizabeth and Ann," in 1635, aged 29 years. He was at Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1635, when he leased a share in the fishing grounds. In 1648 he was at Fairfield, and agreed with the Town 2 February 1649 to build a grist mill. This he sold in 1653, and moved to the district known as Poquonnock, where he purchased a house and land. His will, made 11 November 1682, mentions wife, Christian. Their son Moses, born about 1650, received several parcels of land by the will. He married 24 October 1672 Deborah, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Harvey) Hide. Their only recorded children were: Rebecca and Deborah. Town records are very defective about this time. Perhaps they were parents of Ephraim Jackson, born in October 1704 in Fairfield, (possibly, within the present limits of the Town of Redding). He was a member of the committee to locate the meeting house in Redding 17 January 1750. Thirteen years later, he was on a committee to locate pews in said meeting house, and was elected selectman at the first town meeting of the town, 15 June 1767. He married (2) in June 1730 Martha Blackman, born October 1708. Their youngest child, Ephraim Blackman Jackson, born 10 September 1741 in the portion of Fairfield now Redding, lived in the latter town until after 1775. He enlisted 12 July 1775 as a private in the Tenth Company, commanded by Captain Eli Leavenworth, Seventh Regiment, under Colonel Charles Webb, Connecticut militia, which was reorganized under Webb in 1776 and adopted as a Continental regiment. During the summer of 1775 the companies of this regiment were stationed along the shore of the Sound in guard duty. Later, the regiment was ordered to the Boston camps, as part of Sullivan's Brigade and continued on Winter Hill until discharged at close of enlistment, 10 December 1775. Ephraim Jackson must have removed soon after from Redding. He may have lived for some time in Stephentown, Rensselaer County, New York, but died in Addison, Vermont, where he took the freeman's oath in 1801. The early settlers of that section were driven out by the depredations of Tories and Indians, and it is probable that Jackson was among these. The History of Redding says he went to Addison. In 1897 his grandson, Andrew Jackson, was living in Addison and stated that his (Andrew's) father was born in Stephentown. Redding records show that Hezekiah, father of Andrew, was baptized 27 February 1774, the last child of Ephraim baptized in that Town. Ephraim married 26 June 1766 Martha Hull, who was baptized 19 February 1751 in Redding, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Betts) Hull. Their eldest child, Aaron Jackson, baptized 1 November 1767, married Anna Treadwell, and they were parents of Polly Ann Jackson, wife of Peter Bunn.

The Hull family was founded in America by George Hull, who sailed from Plymouth, England, 30 March 1629 in the 'Mary and John,' and settled first at Dorchester, Massachusetts, where he filled several offices. In 1636 he moved to Windsor, Connecticut, and was representative of that town in the first Connecticut legislature (known as the General Court). His wife, doubtless married in England, bore the baptismal name of Sarah, and survived him. Their second son, Cornelius Hull, born about 1626 in England, was in Fairfield in 1676 and was a large landholder. He married 19 November 1652 Rebecca Jones. Their second son, Cornelius (2) Hull, born 1654, in Fairfield, was founder of the hamlet in that town known as "Hull's Farms," where he died 7 January 1740. He married about 1684 Sarah Sanford, born 5 March 1666, died 1744, daughter of Ezekiel and Rebecca (Whelpley) Sanford. Their third son, Ebenezer Hull, baptized 20 January 1697, lived on "Greenfield Hill" in Fairfield, was an owner of real estate and is mentioned on Town and Church records. He married Martha, whose family name is unknown. Their eldest child, Captain Daniel Hull, was born 20 August 1725 on Greenfield Hill, in what is now Redding, and was a farmer in that Town and in South Berlin, New York. In 1759 he was Captain of the Redding company of Militia, and during the Revolution was lieutenant in an Albany company. Near the close of the Revolution he built the first frame house in the Town of Berlin. He married 2 November 1748 in Redding, Mary Betts, born 1728, died 1815, daughter of Lieutenant Stephen Betts. Their eldest child, Martha Hull, born 2 February 1751, died 1813, married 1766 Ephraim Blackman Jackson. They were parents of Aaron Jackson, baptized 12 November 1767, in Redding, who married Anna Treadwell. They were parents of Polly Ann Jackson, wife of Peter Bunn. Children:

- 129 i Ann Eliza Bunn, born 1823

 - v Celina Caroline Bunn, born 30 August 1833 in Mansfield, New York, went to Trempealeau, Wis. in an early day, with her brother, Romanzo, or sister. Mrs. Van Slyke, and was the first teacher of the public school of Galesville, Wisconsin. She married at the home of her brother in Sparta, 19 June 1866 Sebastian R. Moore, and died 3 March 1868 in Bergen, Genessee County, New York, without issue
 - vi Charles Bunn, born 16 August 1836 in Cattaraugus County, was early at Trempealeau, Wisconsin. He enlisted at St. Louis, Missouri in 1860 in the regular army; fought in the civil war, was taken prisoner and died in the Confederate prison at Florence, South Carolina, in 1863-4, unmarried
 - vii Francis Marion Bunn, born 8 May 1839 in Cattaraugus County, accompanied his brother, Delavan to Wisconsin, enlisted in 1861 in the First Wisconsin Battery. At the battle of Shiloh, where about 10,000 men fell on each side, this battery was stationed in what is still known as "The hornet's nest," one of the hottest parts of the field. He died during the siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, 9 July 1863, unmarried

Mary M. (Polly) Bunn, born 29 September 1801 in Florida, New York; married 27 February 1828 Samuel Sherman. He was a good man in every relation of life, and quite noted for a natural aptitude for or skill in any kind of work, but adopted none as a fixed trade or business, seeming to lack the ability or desire to centralize his faculties upon any one thing and compel success. He was, successively, a miller, wheelwright, carpenter, mason, bricklayer, hotel man and farmer. His wife, Mary M. Bunn, affectionally known as Polly, was well educated, a teacher from 1822 until her marriage. She was the first teacher in District No. 17, Town of Milford, after its formation (now District No. 10, Town of Oneonta); she afterward taught at Milford Center, when the district extended from Collier to about a mile above Portlandville. She is most lovingly remembered as a warmhearted and hospitable woman, kindly in disposition and speech, an excellent housewife and a loving, devoted and self-sacrificing wife and mother. She died 9 July, 1870. (See Appendix C). Children:

Willis Edson Bunn, born 25 April 1815 in New Lisbon, Otsego County, New York, lived in the adjoining Town of Morris, where he died 14 April 1884. He was a person of strong character, a good citizen, respected and esteemed. Though not a member, he attended Divine worship at Zion Episcopal church in Morris. Politically, a Democrat, he exercised considerable influence in the councils of his party. He was a tinner by trade, and kept a hardware store in Morris for some twenty-five years. His residence was on Grove street, in the village of Morris, now owned by a Mr. Sprague. He married 25 September 1839 Emily Amanda Hodge, who was born 25 September 1820 and died 1 May 1882, a daughter John Andrew and Evelyn (Goodrich) Hodge of Otego, Otsego County, New York. Her father was known as "Squire Hodge," indicating his position as Justice of the Peace. During the gold rush to California, he set out, with his son Walter, to seek a competence. He told his wife that he would return as soon as he had accumulated the desired amount. In time she received a letter stating that his goal was gained and he would start for home in a few days. Shortly after, word came that both father and son were drowned in crossing the Yuba river. None of their riches ever reached his family.

Emily (Hodge) Bunn was born in the Town of Otego. She was a person of abiding charm, genial disposition and abundant hospitality. Her home was a center of life and laughter for people of three generations; it was rendezvous for her grandchildren and her friends. Late in life she made a home for the three motherless boys of her son Albert. On the day when one of the dreams of her life was realized, in the ordination of her son Albert Carrier Bunn to the priesthood of the Protestant Episcopal Church, she was stricken with pneumonia, and died in her sixty-second year. She had spent her life in the service of others. Children:

Harriet Lavinia Bunn, born 24 February 1831, at Tribes Hill, married at Amsterdam 11 May 1863 Rev. Charles Albion Conant, born 28 July 1833 at Temple, Maine. He was a representative of one of the Oldest American families, founded in Massachusetts by Roger Conant in 1623. The first of the name from whom direct line can be traced was John Conant, who lived in the parish of Budleigh, Devonshire England, born about 1520, in Gittisham, some 12 miles northeast of Budleigh. His ancestors were originally of French extraction, residing for many generations at Gittisham, near Honiton. In 1577 John Conant was church warden at East Budleigh, and was buried there 15 March 1596. His son, Richard Conant, born about 1546, probably at East Budleigh, was assessed for lands there in 1588; was church warden; in 1630 was rated at two shillings and sixpence, the second highest in the parish. His property was inventoried at £129, 14s, 4d. He married 4 February 1578 Agnes Clark, daughter of John Clark, Sr., of Collyton.

Roger Conant, youngest of the eight children of the above couple, was baptized 9 April, 1592 in All Saints' Church, East Budleigh. Probably, he was well educated for his time, and his native ability was proven in many ways after he came to America. After 1609 he went to London, where he served an apprenticeship of seven years to the Salters' Company. Afterward he engaged in business, as salter, in the parish of St. Lawrence in London. In 1623 he came to this country, probably in the ship "Ann", which arrived at Plymouth in July of that year. He located first at Nantasket (later the home of Edward Bunn) and soon removed to what is now known as Governor's Island, in Boston Harbor, first named Conant's Island. He was chosen to manage the affairs of the Dorchester Company at Cape Ann, and in 1626 moved the colony to Salem. He was active in many capacities, and accumulated much land and in 1634 was deputy to the General Court. He died 19 November 1679, and his estate was inventoried at £258, a large sum in those days. He married in the parish of St. Ann's, London, 11 November 1618 Sarah Holton. Their second son, Lot Conant, born about 1624, at Nantasket or Cape Ann, died 29 September 1674 in Beverly, Massachusetts. He was in Marblehead in 1657 and, about 1667 removed to Beverly. He was selectman of Marblehead in 1664, and was dismissed from Salem Church 4 July 1667,, to assist in forming a Church in Beverly. He married Elizabeth Walton, who was baptized 27 October 1629, daughter of Rev. William Walton. Their third son, Lot Conant, was born 16 February 1658 in Beverly, where he continued to reside until 1717, when he removed to Ipswich. At the age of 17 years he was a soldier in King Philip's war, and participated in the fight at Fort Narragansett, 19 December 1675; was admitted to First Beverly Church 19 July 1702. He was a farmer and bought and sold lands. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary Pride. Their second son, John Conant, born 15 December 1652, in Beverly, was a farmer and weaver, possessing 60 acres of upland, which was part of a grant made to his grandfather for service in King Philip's war. He died 30 September 1724. He married 7 May 1678 Bithiah, daughter of Andrew and Bithiah Mansfield of Lynn, born 7 April 1658, died 27 July 1720. Their eldest son, Lot Conant, baptized 1 June 1679 in Beverly, settled about 1716 in Concord, Massachusetts, where he died 20 September 1767. He was a party in several land transactions. He married 15 May 1698 Martha Cleaves, who died 15 February 1725 and was buried in Concord, aged 44. Robert Conant, their eldest child, was born 26 April, 1699 in Beverly, was a farmer and carpenter and settled in Chelmsford in 1726. About 1754 he removed to Stow, Massachusetts, where he died 27 March 1773. He was twice married, and only baptismal names of his wives are known. The first wife, Esther, was the mother of Peter Conant, born about 1732 in Chelmsford. He lived in Stow and was in the Continental army in 1776. His will was proven in 1785, and the inventory of his estate placed its value at £983, 16s, 4d. The will mentions wife Sarah (probably Gibson). Their eldest child, Ephraim Conant, born 16 January 1757 in Stow, participated in the battle of Lexington, 19 April 1775, a member of Whitcomb's Company, Prescott's Regiment. He lived for a time in Georgetown Massachusetts, and in Temple, New Hampshire, being there in 1784; later in Thomaston and Temple, Maine, a farmer and died in latter town 22 January 1826. He married in Temple, New Hampshire Rebecca Hayward. Joseph Conant, their fourth son, born 25 January 1783, in Temple, New Hampshire, settled about 1803 in Temple, Maine, where he was a farmer, captain of militia, and filled various town offices, and died 26 July 1845. He married there 9 June 1809 Betsey Drury, born June 1790, died December 1875.

Charles Albion Conant, youngest of the twelve children of Joseph and Betsey (Drury) Conant, graduated from Union College, at Schenectady, in 1859 and subsequently studied theology at Bangor Theological Seminary, in his native State. He filled several pastorates in Congregational Churches, among which may be mentioned those at Alden and Five Corners, New York, Auburn, Massachusetts, and Duluth, Minnesota. The birthplaces of some of his children indicate that he resided some time at other points in New York. His last pastorate was at St. Paul, Minnesota. He died at Schenectady, New York, in 1916. His wife died in the following year, at the same place. Children:

Ann Eliza Bunn, eldest child of Peter and Polly Ann (Jackson) Bunn, born 24 October 1823, in South Hartwick, Otsego County, New York, married 13 May 1843 Rev. David Oyer Van Slyke in Ellicottville, New York, who was born 22 October 1818 at Herkimer, New York. They lived at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, where he died 7 February 1890 and she died 5 September 1897. Mr. Van Slyke was a deep student, and possessed a large library of theological and historical works. He was a student of mnemonics and developed a most remarkable memory, whose feats astonished the most learned. He perused the bible through many times and could quote much of it literally at any time. Of a controversial disposition, he delighted in arguments and debates, and could handle arguments of an adversary seriatim without making any notes. In early life he was a teacher, later farmer and "local preacher" of the Methodist Church, but, having no charge, was obliged to obtain a livelihood through other means than preaching. As a farmer or business man, he was not successful, was sometimes in financial straits. He was the author of two books, one on Baptism and the other descriptive of the beauties of his home region of Wisconsin, entitled "The Garden of Eden." In 1862 he was largely instrumental in the organization of Company C, of the 30th Wisconsin Regiment of Volunteers, and served through a term of three years, with rank of sergeant. After lying in camp at Madison for a long period, this organization was located in the Northwest, defending the frontier against hostile Indians. A son also served in the same company, enlisting a few days before completing his sixteenth year. When asked by the recruiting officer if he was eighteen years old, he replied: "My birthday is next Friday." Through this equivocation, he was assumed to be of proper age and was allowed to enlist. Children:

- 233 i Celina Orleana Van Slyke, born 1844
- 234 ii Augustus Peter Van Slyke, born 1845
- 235 iii Narcissa G. Van Slyke, born 1849

Delavan Bunn, eldest son of Peter and Polly Ann (Jackson) Bunn, was born 11 June 1825 at South Hartwick, Otsego County, New York, and was among the pioneers who pushed on toward the West, sharing the privations and hardships of the frontier in Wisconsin, Dakota Territory and Oregon, and laying down his burdens at Shaw, Marion County, Oregon, 5 September 1906. He was reared on a farm, and agriculture occupied his attention through life. With his parents, he moved in early life to Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York, then a rather new region, where virgin soil was subdued and a farm developed. In 1859 he became a pioneer on his own account, and located in Trempealeau County, Wisconsin, settling near the Mississippi river, in a new settlement. Here he developed a farm and again moved on in 1880 to Kingsbury County, Dakota Territory, now in the State of South Dakota, midway north and south, near the eastern border of the State. At that time homestead land was plenty, and the settler had only to choose and live upon the land a few years in order to become its owner, for a small sum paid to the Government of the United States. He was the first to introduce sheep in that section and was successful in maintaining a profitable flock. After sixteen years' residence in Dakota, Mr. Bunn moved again toward the setting sun, in 1896, and continued to enjoy the life of a farmer for ten years more, departing to a better land in his eighty-second year. He shared in the religious faith and hopes of his parents, and was a faithful member of the Methodist Church, a thorough fundamentalist. A domestic soul, he cared little for public honors, but served at one time as chairman of the board of supervisors of the Town of Trempealeau, from a sense of duty. Usually a supporter of the Republican party, he acted for two years with the Populists while in Dakota. He married 4 September 1848 in Cattaraugus County, New York, Lucy Ann Hollister, who was born 22 November 1824, in Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York, daughter of Samuel L. and Sibyl (Norton) Hollister. She survived her husband but a few months, dying 10 January 1907 at Salem, Oregon.

LUCY A. BUNN

Born on the outskirts of civilization, the only daughter among eleven brothers, the family so poor there was often not enough to satisfy a growing appetite, much of the housework as well as home manufacture fell to her lot. Still she somehow obtained enough "book larnin'" to make a success of teaching, both in the home district and at Port Huron, Mich., where she went with her older brothers, before her marriage. In those days all writing was done with pens made from goose quills, and an important point in the examination of applicants for teaching positions was to determine their ability to make such a pen, and to keep it in proper condition, this being no small accomplishment. Upon the Wisconsin farm, through the very love of hard work, she turned out tons of home made cheese, barrels of soap and quantities of stocking yarn, spun in the evenings, upon a high wheel. Meanwhile no call of distress from the neighborhood went unheeded, and she saw many a new born child successfully launched into the world. This work was always done with no thought of payment. Meanwhile she was wont to oversee the preparation of meals and lodging for her own and for chance strangers, the tramp being as welcome as the minister. For at least 70 years she was a member of the Methodist Church. She was descended from several of the oldest Connecticut families, and carried in her veins the blood of Revolutionary patriots who strove with their contemporaries for freedom from foreign rule and achieved American independence. Elsewhere in this work (Appendix A) will be found the journal of Josiah Hollister kept during his service in the Revolutionary army, giving "at first hand" an account of the hardships and suffering of those stern patriots who braved all, that we may enjoy the blessings of liberty today. The genealogy of Hollister and Norton families will be partially covered in the same connection. Children:

Romanzo Bunn, born 24 September 1829, at South Hartwick, Otsego County, New York, rose to a high position as lawyer and judge, as well as a citizen and a man. His advantages were few in early life, but he was made of stuff that will assert itself anywhere in the world. He was the second son of Peter and Polly Ann (Jackson) Bunn, plain farming people, who settled in the Town of Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York, when the son Romanzo, was in his third year. His boyhood was passed after the manner of farmers' sons in a new region. At the age of 24 years he was admitted to the bar and for about a year he practiced law at Ellicottville, near his home. In 1854 he located at Galesville, Trempealeau County, Wisconsin, and was soon elected District Attorney for that county; later removed to Sparta, Monroe County, same State, where he was again elected District Attorney. In 1860 he was a member of the Wisconsin Legislature, in which he made himself useful and known to the state leaders. From 1869 to 1877 he was Judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit of the State; from 30 October 1877 to 1905 he was United States District Judge of the Western District of Wisconsin, and retired at the age of 76 years. His home was, for many years at Madison, the State Capital, where he was prominent in civic affairs for fifty years and his death, which occurred 25 January 1909, at Madison, caused universal sorrow. His rugged, simple, true nature, his varied tastes and accomplishments, his high legal attainments and eminent judicial service, his fellowship with philosophers, scientists and men of letters and his broad, all-comprehending charity, made him a type of the best citizenship of his State. An illustration of the workings of his legal mind is made by relation of the following incident: While on the circuit bench, his mother asked him, one day, if he did not feel badly over sending a man to the penitentiary. His reply was: "Mother, I didn't send the man to the penitentiary; it was the law that did it. The people made the law, for the protection of society. A jury of twelve men heard the testimony and found that he had transgressed the law. It became my duty, as a servant of the people to pronounce the sentence which the law imposes." How much more nearly would justice be done, if all in responsible positions held similar views. Judge Bunn married 5 August 1854, Sarah Purdy, who was born 24 January 1832, daughter of Edmund and Sally (Wilson) Purdy, and died 17 September 1918 at Madison. Children:

Henry Lester Bunn, born 10 July 1843 in Mansfield, went with his brother to Trempealeau County, Wisconsin, in 1859. Owing to a severe injury to his knee in boyhood and to the want of proper surgical skill, he suffered the loss of the joint, the leg being drawn up and practically useless. He became a teacher when quite young, alternating this work with attendance at Galesville University, from which he was graduated 1869 with the degree of A. B., especially proficient in the classics. At one time he was principal of the Galesville public schools. After attending Bryant & Stratton's Business College at Chicago, he became the first teacher of mathematics at the La Crosse Business College. He held a life teacher's certificate of Wisconsin. He served 11 years as town clerk, and three years as justice of the peace, and was secretary of the Trempealeau County Agricultural Society. He was elected Register of Deeds of Trempealeau County for two terms and subsequently was Clerk of the Court in that county two years. For some years after going to Wisconsin, he continued to reside with his brother, Delavan Bunn, with whom he went west; later his duties required his residence at Galesville, then the county seat. An accomplished musician and singer, he was for some time leader of the Galesville silver cornet band. Near the close of his life, he lived with a son at Westby, Wisconsin, and two years before his death, went with the son and a daughter to the vicinity of Plevna, Montana, where all three homesteaded land. He died there 17 June 1911. He married 18 September 1872 Emma Louisa Adams, born 16

Walter Hodge Bunn, eldest child of Willis Edson and Amanda (Hodge) Bunn, was born 21 July 1840 at the village of Louisville, now Morris, in the Town of Morris, Otsego County, New York, and grew up in that vicinity. The groundwork of his education was supplied by the public school and he was a student at the private parochial school of Andrew Burt at Morris. At the age of thirty years he was admitted to the bar and began the practice of law, taking a keen interest in politics from an early age. From 1873 to 1879 he served as County Clerk of his native County, and in 1883-84 was clerk of the General Assembly of the State of New York. In 1885 he was appointed by President Cleveland to be United States Marshal for the Northern District of New York, in which position he served efficiently four years. He was clerk of the State Constitutional Convention of 1890. Mr. Bunn was one of the original Cleveland men, and at the National Democratic Convention of 1892, at Chicago, he was one of the delegates who carried on the determined movement to secure the nomination of Grover Cleveland for his second term in the presidency. In the following year he was appointed Appraiser of the Port of New York, and held that position four years. For a quarter of a century his home was in Queens County, New York, where he continued to be active in political circles. At the time of his death, 4 February 1918, his home was at No. 470 Napier Avenue, Richmond Hill, in the Borough of Queens. He was president of the Nameoke Club, and a member of the Richmond Hill Democratic Club—its successor. For many years he was president of the Otsego County Society in New York. The only office he held in Queens County was that of Commissioner of Public works under Borough President Gresser. In the intervals of public service, he was actively engaged in the practice of law, and for five years preceding his death was head of the law firm of Bunn & Collins, with offices in Jamaica, New York. In his later years he gave much time and attention to gathering material for this genealogy—a most self-sacrificing undertaking, which made inroads on his income, and which merits the gratitude of succeeding generations. His religious affiliations were with the Protestant Episcopal Church. Mr. Bunn married 23 December 1862 Amy Shove Bowne, who was born 1 July 1843, and died 15 February 1914, daughter of Charles A. and Mary A. Bowne of Morris, New York. She was a descendant of George Bowne, born 1748, a member of the Committee of Correspondence for New York to communicate with the other colonies relative to calling a Continental Congress. Children:

Albert Carrier Bunn, born 24 November 1845 at Cape Vincent, New York, rendered distinguished and self-sacrificing service to mankind. After the usual early schooling, he attended Hobart College, from which he received the degree of M. A., and the Medical Department of the University of Buffalo granted him the degree of M. D. in 1867. He began the practice of medicine at Waterford, New York, and later, practiced at his home place, Morris. In 1874 he went to China under appointment of the Protestant Episcopal Board of Missions, and started medical work at Fuchang in the winter of 1874-5. This work continued until 1880, when, on account of the death of his wife and co-worker, and the illness of himself and other members of his family, he was obliged to return to the United States. of his work in China was the establishment of St. Peter's Hospital for men and the Elizabeth Bunn Memorial Hospital for Women and children. In recent years these institutions have been brought together under one roof and are known as the Church General Hospital, though each branch retains its original title. After recovering his health Dr. Bunn studied for the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and was ordained to the priesthood at Zion church, Morris, New York, by Bishop Doane. From 1881 to 1891 he was Rector of the Church of the Atonement in Brooklyn, New York, and for the succeeding ten years was Rector of the Church Charity Foundation of Brooklyn, which position included the superintendency of St John's Hospital. For another ten years he was Rector of St. Matthew's Church, Brooklyn Manor. On account of continued ill health, he resigned this position in 1911. He passed away while seeking health at Ashville, North Carolina, 24 December 1912. For many years his home had been at Richmond Hill, Borough of Queens, Greater New York. He married 11 May 1871 at Morris, New York, Elizabeth Darling, born 26 October 1840 at Pittsfield, New York, daughter of Wheeler and Sarah Darling, died 28 January 1879 at Fuchang China, and was buried at Hankow, China. Celina Orleana Van Slyke, eldest child of Ann Eliza Bunn and David O. Van Slyke, born 8 April 1844 in Cattaraugus County, New York, died 29 September 1918 at Portland, Oregon; married 1 January 1864 at Galesville, Wisconsin, Rev. Avery Jairus Davis, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church. For fifty years Mr. Davis preached to various charges in Wisconsin, and was Presiding Elder of the Superior District for a period of six years. Mr. Davis was born 3 May 1836 at Waterbury Center, Vermont, a son of Andrew and Martha Davis. At the age of 18 years he went to Galesville, Wisconsin, where he worked at carpenter work, earning his way through Galesville University, graduating in 1864. In 1890 he received from his alma mater the degree of Doctor of Divinity. During his minority he sent a stipulated sum annually to his father in Vermont. On entering the ministry, he became a member of the West Wisconsin Conference, and had charges at several large towns, including, Eau Claire, Platteville, Menominee and Superior. He died 25 November 1925, at the home of a daughter (Mrs. Kloster) in Portland, Oregon. In political contests he supported the principles of the Republican Party. Children:

Augustus Peter Van Slyke, eldest son of Rev. David O. Van Slyke, inherited the cool head of his Bunn ancestors, was very active and strong of endurance. A strong swimmer, he easily swam the Mississippi river and made a standing jump of eleven and one-half feet, with weights. When a lad of nine years, he was sent in haste for a doctor, with directions to walk back and let the physician ride the horse, urging best speed of which the horse was capable. When the latter dismounted, he thought he saw a ghost, as the boy was standing behind the horse. On being questioned, as to the possibility of accompanying a running horse, the lad said: "Oh, I just grabbed 'Old Billy' by the tail and came along!" He spent some years in early life in Pennsylvania, where he built many oil derricks, for pumping oil from wells. These structures were, usually, 75 feet in height and three feet in diameter at the top. When one was completed, it was his custom to lay a board across the top, on which he stood on his head. During most of his life, he was a farmer at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, and is still quite active, at the age of 82 years, born 8 August 1845, at Kenosha, Wisconsin. Five days before completing his seventeenth year, he enlisted in the same company in which his father served as sergeant of the civil war army, and served three years, becoming corporal. He married 4 July 1872 at Mill Creek, Clarion County, Pennsylvania, Susan Carrouth Hall, born 30 September 1849 in Butler County, Pennsylvania, daughter of Cornelius Washington and Susannah (Slater) Hall, died 23 February 1919 at Trempealeau, Wisconsin. After her death, Mr. Van Slyke removed to Salem, Oregon, where he now resides, accompanied by two of his children, and two grandchildren. Children:

- i Gertrude Ann Van Slyke, born 12 April 1873; married 3 May 1893 John Carl Jarcho; divorced; living at Salem, Oregon; children: Otis Augustus Jarcho, born 30 March 1895; Minnie Leila Jarcho, born 8 February 1897

Narcissa Gertrude Van Slyke, born 3 April 1847 in Kenosha County, Wisconsin; married 22 August 1869 at Galesville, Orion Eugene Stearns who was born 1 August 1847 at Northfield, Vermont. For many years they occupied a homestead in Kingsbury County, South Dakota, and later, at Summit, South Dakota, where Mr. Stearns died 11 January 1920, and where his widow now resides. Orion Eugene Stearns was descended from one of the oldest American families. The name always has been spelled Sterne in England; among distinguished persons of the name may be mentioned Richard, Lord Archbishop of York, and Lawrence Sterne, noted English author, who wrote "Tristram Shandy," and other famous books. In early New England the English spelling was continued. The name may have been derived from starling (symbol of industry) an image often displayed before a man's place of business. The early New Englander had a trick of adding "s" to any name. If an event took place "over to Sterne's," a few repetitions sufficed to fix the name among the neighbors as Stearns its present form. One of the early Massachusetts names was Oak, but it soon became Oaks, and multitudes of similar instances might be cited. Among the thousands of the name of Stearns who have been traced are 132 graduates of schools of learning, 83 clergymen, 80 physicians, 59 lawyers, numerous college presidents, a railroad president, governors, high military officers and others distinguished in various walks of life.

Isaac Sterne came from Nayland, England, and sailed from Yarmouth 12 April 1630 in the ship "Arabella," in the company which included Governor Winthrop, Saltonstall, Garfield (ancestor of the martyr president). He was accompanied by his wife Mary, and daughters Mary and Ann; settled in Watertown, Massachusetts, where he was among the first freeman admitted in 1631, and died 19 June 1671, leaving an estate inventoried at £300. His wife survived him and died 2 April 1677. Their second son, Isaac Stearns, born 6 January 1633, in Watertown, was a freeman in 1665 and settled at Cambridge Farms, now Lexington, Massachusetts, where he died 29 August 1676. He married 24 June 1660 Sarah, daughter of Captain Richard and Elizabeth Beers. Captain Beers was one of the original proprietors of Watertown, commanded a company in King Philip's war and was killed in battle with Indians at Northfield, Massachusetts, 4 September 1675. Isaac Stearns' widow married Thomas Wheeler of Concord, Massachusetts. The youngest child of Isaac Stearns, John Stearns, born 1675 in Lexington, lived in Concord and Bedford, Massachusetts, owned land in the latter town in 1729 and died there 14 June 1734. An interesting item of his will reads as follows: "I give and bequeethe to my daughter Mercy Kendall £5 and all the interest I have in a mulatto girl named Mary now living with me." He married 26 April 1699 Mercy Davis, born 12 August 1677, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Meadows) Davis of Concord. Their third child, Eleazer Stearns, born 4 September 1704, was a clothier at Newton in 1734, later at Concord. His first wife, Abigail, married 1733, was the mother of William Stearns, their eldest child, born 27 April 1734. He was in Littleton in 1764, later in Harvard, and in 1769 was lessee of a lot in Rindge, New Hampshire. Thence he moved to Rockingham, Vermont, where he died in 1804. He married in January 1755 Elizabeth Lawrence of Ashby, Massachusetts. Their eldest child, William Stearns was born 24 October 1755, was a farmer in Rockingham and a Revolutionary soldier for three years. He died 12 January 1842; married in 1781 Lydia Glazier, born 27 February 1760, died about 1848, daughter of William Glazier of Rockingham. They were the parents of Eber Stearns, second son, born 23 October 1787 in Rockingham, who settled in Victory, Essex County, Vermont, where he died. He married about 1812 Cynthia Kendall, who was born 11 October 1790. They were the parents of Jehiel H. Stearns, who died in Victory in 1859. He married Mary Louisa Bragg, who was born 13 May 1818 in Warren, Vermont, and died in August 1884 in Hyde Park, Vermont. They must have lived for a short time in Northfield, Vermont, where their son, Orion Eugene Stearns, was born 1 August 1847.

Some Account of the Blizzard of January 12, 1888In Kingsbury County, Dakota Territory*.. By Romanzo N. Bunn

I have been trying to put on paper some meagre description of the "prairie blizzard", as we experienced it on rare occasions, in the days of the early settlement of the Dakota prairies. I have failed to satisfy myself, and despair using any form or combination of words which will accurately indicate to the reader the true nature of a phenomenon I have witnessed three times in the course of a moderately long life. The reason I would not be able to make the reader understand it is that he probably has been fortunate enough never to have experienced it in nature, and that the human mind is incapable of accurately conceiving a thing varying so radically from what has fallen under personal observation.

Technically the blizzard is a cyclonic wintry storm, originating in the far north and traveling in a southeasterly direction. First comes some hours or days of southerly winds, with rising temperature, seeming very pleasant, after what has preceded it. Next you wake up to find a dead calm, accompanied by a rapid fall of fleecy snow, coming straight down. If you are wise, this is the day you will look out; for the hour—nay the minute—of change approaches. Like a flash it is upon you, in the form of a ninety mile gale from the northwest. You hear the roof creak with the first impact, and from the window can see nothing but flying snow. If you are out, even in your own dooryard, you are probably hopelessly lost at once, knowing not which way to turn. Whether it be man or beast, a failure to find shelter at once will surely result in terrible hardship and probably death.

On the day mentioned, January 12, 1888, the family of Orion Eugene Stearns (husband of Narcissa Gertrude Van Slyke (235) lived on a farm near De Smet, the county seat of Kingsbury County, a region of absolutely treeless prairie. The neighborhood was sparsely settled, and the school at a great distance from the home. Stearns was returning from the school with one horse hitched to a "pung", or flat bottomed, toungeless sled, with him being his three children, Guy Van, aged 15; Nellie Myrtle, 12; and Bessie Louisa, 8. Unable to keep to the accustomed path, they drifted with the storm, crossing an unoccupied school section (a section is one mile square) to the south of which lay a half section farm, belonging to the writer hereof. I was then County Auditor, and resided at the county seat, this farm being untenanted. Along the western line I had planted a hedge row of white willows, one mile long, which then stood perhaps fifteen feet high. Just what course they traveled to get to this point could not be told. It is certain that poor Pedro, the horse, had by this time blundered and stumbled blindly for three to four miles through immense drifts, crossing ravines, and was worn and exhausted when he reached the drift forming on the leeward side of the willows. Here he fell, to rise no more. Sometime during the night he died.

The father, left thus without means of advancing, did all he could to protect his daughters, turning the sled on edge and placing the blankets over both sled and children. Then began an all night vigil, working with the shovel he always carried and with the aid of Guy, saved the girls from serious harm, though they were somewhat frost-bitten. This was kept up throughout the night, while the drift grew larger and larger, and the temperature sank lower and lower, probably reaching 35 to 40 below ere morning dawned.

Had the storm continued, as is quite common, through three days and nights, there could have been but one result, as survival through such period would have been impossible. About daylight on the 13th there were signs of abating, then the blizzard condition ceased almost as suddenly as it had arisen. It is probable no snow had been actually falling for many hours, notwithstanding the fact that the air had been full of flying snow.

Scarce thinking of themselves, father and son began to figure how to rescue the girls from their predicament. Traveling over the crust was now easy, so it was decided that Guy was to hasten as speedily as possible to the nearest help about a mile away. The boy started out, and made good progress on his feet for a considerable part of the distance. Then a strange thing happened to him. His lower limbs must have been frozen solid, all the way through. In this condition the bones were so brittle they snapped off and broke through the frozen flesh. That, however, caused no pain or bleeding, but simply inconvenienced him, as he could no longer rise. He said that at first he thought he would lie there and die, but the remembrance of his sisters tightly frozen in that drift nerved him to renewed effort, and he started to draw himself by his hands. Meanwhile three young men who occupied the residence toward which he was slowly progressing, were scanning the vicinity, fearing some one might need help. They thought they saw something moving, and thus they brought in the most pitiable object imaginable and as soon as they understood the situation, were on their way to the rescue of the others.

We feel that all was done that were possible, for the young hero. His limbs were amputated, but the shock was too severe, and his sufferings were ended by death on February 28, 1888.

Mr. Stearns also was badly crippled and helpless for many months, losing both toes and heels from both feet.

Conditions under which this continent has been settled have brought out many heroic acts. Men of our own kin have died in battle or in military prison, but few have surpassed in heroism the act of poor Guy Van Stearns, in dragging his broken and frozen body nearly half a mile over the snow crust, with no hope of saving himself, but with his only thought of rescuing the two young sisters tightly frozen in the terrible drift.

Following that date, a name which had been given by those early on our northwestern prairies, to a storm as distinctive of the region as is its sister storm, the simoon of the Arabian desert (the effect in each case depending upon the strength of the gale), was taken up by people in other sections, who had no conception of its real meaning, until it came to be applied to anything in the nature of a wintry storm. The writer has made some effort to combat this misuse by irresponsible newspaper scribblers, but to no effect. Is it any wonder that one who has passed through experiences of this kind will ever afterwards shudder at the very mention of the name BLIZZARD?

It is, however, realized that our language is in the hands of its users, and while we may deplore the changing of the meaning of a particular word, that word will continue to be used with the new signification, whether, we as individuals approve or otherwise.

Frank Romanzo Van Slyke, born 21 March 1852 near Ellicottville, Cattaraugus County, New York, resides at 1160 Broadway, Salem, Oregon; graduated at Galesville University and at the La Crosse Business College; was fancy penman and a teacher; was a homesteader at Madison, Lake County, Dakota Territory in 1878, there being then no railroad nearer than Sioux Falls. He married (1) 15 April 1877 at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, Adelia Wright, born there 6 March 1856, died 17 September 1884 at Madison, South Dakota, daughter of Hollister Wright and Roxana (Boynton) Wright; married (2) 3 July 1888 Ida Estella Clark, born 20 August 1862 at Blanchardsville, LaFayette County, Wisconsin, died 28 December 1922 at Salem, Oregon, daughter of Cyrus and Sarah (Strickland) Clark. Children of first wife:

- i Emery Claude Van Slyke, born 28 October 1878, married Minnie A. Clark
- ii Stella Adelia Van Slyke, born 14 May 1884, died exactly four months old

Child of second wife:

- iii Carroll Guy Van Slyke, born 1 April 1892, married at Atlanta, Georgia, 12 August 1922 Mrs. Mina Beck. His acquaintance with her began during the World War, when his command was camped in the vicinity of Atlanta.

Charles Sumner Van Slyke, born 8 February 1854 at Kenosha, Wisconsin, died 22 October 1927 at Carthage, South Dakota. When two years old, he went with his parents to Galesville, Wisconsin, where his education was supplied by a small Methodist institution (Galesville University). His ambition to become a lawyer was curbed by frail health, which prevented the completion of his studies. Later, he joined a gang of men who went to Huron, South Dakota, to participate in the construction of the Chicago & Northwestern railway at that point. Returning to Trempealeau County, he operated a small farm at Blair and also taught school. He purchased a farm of 20 acres at Galesville, which he conducted as a dairy farm, and supplied the town with milk. In 1912 he removed to North Dakota, and, in association with his son (John) owned and operated a farm of 320 acres, just outside the village of Cleveland. He was active in the community life until his death, which took place while on a visit at the home of his daughter (Mrs. Stone) at Carthage, South Dakota. He was a Republican and both he and his wife were Presbyterians. He married in 1875 Ida Clarissa Chapin, born 9 April 1854 at Orange, New Jersey, eldest child of Newton and Ann (Clark) Chapin. The Chapin family is among the oldest in the United States, descended from Deacon Samuel Chapin, son of John and Phillippi (Easton) Chapin of Paignton, England. Samuel Chapin was baptized there 8 October 1598 and died 11 November 1675 in Springfield, Massachusetts, where he was among the most active pioneers. He came to this country in 1635, and located first at Roxbury, Massachusetts. He married 9 February 1623 Cicely Penny, baptized 21 February 1601 at Paignton, died 8 February 1683 in Springfield, daughter of Henry and Jane Penny. Their fifth child, Josiah Chapin, born 1634, died 9 October 1726 in Mendon, same colony, where he settled on land received from his father. He married 30 November 1658 Mary King, of Weymouth, born 15 June 1639, died 3 May 1676 in Braintree, daughter of John and Dorothy King. Captain Seth Chapin, seventh child of Josiah, born 4 August 1668 settled in Milford, where he was a surveyor and large landowner, and died in Mendon 1 April 1746; married 23 May 1789 Mary Reed, born 21 March 1769 in Weymouth. Their fourth child, Deacon John Chapin, born 13 May 1698 in Milford, was one of 26 to form the Second Church of Mendon, in which town he died 3 August 1770;

married 1718-19 Dorcas, born 4 October 1694, died 22 August 1767 in Mendon. Joshua, fifth child of Deacon John, born 1728, was dismissed with his wife from Second Church of Mendon to the Church at Marlborough, Massachusetts, 12 July 1722; married 20 March 1751 Mary Hayward, born 13 December 1729, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Warfield) Hayward. Their third child, Peter Chapin, born 23 September 1756, enlisted three times in the Continental army, was present at the battles of Saratoga, Bennington and Stillwater. He died 23 September 1839 in Monterey, Massachusetts; married Elizabeth Austin, born 1758, died 9 October 1838 in Tyringham. Their youngest child, Calvin Chapin, born 2 November 1800, lived in Monterey, Sandisfield and New Marlboro, and died December 1855 in latter town; married 24 November 1824 at Sandisfield Artemisia Sears, born there 8 December 1802, died 13 January 1849. Their third child, Newton Spencer Chapin, born 11 June 1831 in Monterey, was a fine scholar, teacher, lived a short time in Orange, New Jersey, and later in Trempealeau and Galesville, Wisconsin, and died 14 February 1914 in Seward, Illinois. He married 5 July 1852 at Orange, New Jersey, Sarah Ann Clark, born 23 January 1830, died 30 August 1871. They were the parents of Ida Calrissa Chapin, wife of Charles Sumner Van Slyke. She died October 1926, and both were buried at Galesville. Children:

- i John Sears Van Slyke, born 9 July 1878, resides at Cleveland, North Dakota
- ii Charles Edwin Van Slyke, born 1 August 1880, resides at Terre Haute, Indiana; married 12 September 1906 Anna Ryan
- iii George Ernest Van Slyke, born 22 January 1882, resides at La Crosse, Wisconsin; married 9 April 1907 Clara Cook
- iv Robert Newton Van Slyke, born 3 April 1883, resides at Sioux Falls, South Dakota
- v Lizzie Celina Van Slyke, born 24 December 1887, is the wife of C. A. Stone of Carthage, South Dakota

vi Grace Van Slyke died three days old

Alice Adelia Bunn, eldest child of Delavan and Lucy A. (Hollister) Bunn, born 9 October 1849 in the Town of Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York, died 4 June 1925 in Minneapolis, Minnesota; married 9 October 1867 at her father's home at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, George Washington Gale, born 11 July 1842 at Waterbury, Vermont, son of Hiram and Sarah (Bryant) Gale, died 7 October 1920 at Minneapolis, Minnesota. He was a soldier in the war of 1861, enlisting in September of that year in the First Wisconsin Battery, under Captain (afterwards Colonel) Foster, and participated in severe campaigning down the Mississippi valley; was promoted corporal at Cumberland Gap 1862; he fought in what is still known as the "Hornet's Nest," at the battle of Shiloh, Tennessee, where about ten thousand men fell on each side, and through Grant's campaign ending with the surrender of Vicksburg and in other important actions. He served in Texas under Washburn and was in the rear guard covering retreat of Banks from Alexandria in April and May 1864, and completed three years of service. After his return home, he served as postmaster at Galesville (a town founded by his uncle, Hon. George Gale), later moving to Minneapolis, where some of his children are now living. The Gale family is an old one in this country, founded by Richard Gale, who was of record in Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1640. In that year he purchased six acres of land and, on the second of December, same year, acquired 250 acres. His wife's baptismal name was May; they were, undoubtedly wed in England, hence her family name and date of marriage are unrecorded in America. Their second child and eldest son, Abraham Gale, was admitted freeman 11 October 1682, was selectman in 1706 and died 15 September 1718, aged 75 years. He was a farmer and member of the Church. His widow, Sarah, died 14 May 1728, aged about 72 years. The eldest of their 16 children, Abraham Gale, was born 1674 in Watertown and occupied the paternal homestead; married 6 December 1699 Rachel Parkhurst, born 30 December 1778 in Watertown, died 30 January 1767, in her 90th year. Isaac, son of Abraham Gale, jr., born 15 January 1708 in Watertown, lived in Framingham, whence he moved in 1733, to Sutton, where he probably died; was captain of militia and bequeathed his sword to descendants bearing the name of Isaac; married 1731 Judith Sawyer. Their third son, Isaac Gale, born 1732 in Framingham, moved with his father to Sutton in 1733; married 1756 Mehitabel Dwinel, settled in Royalton in 1768 and died 19 May 1779. Peter Gale, his eldest child, born 4 December 1756 in Sutton, located in 1793 at Barre, Vermont, moving thence in 1817 to Colchester, same State, where he died in 1818; married 15 April 1779 Prudence French of Royalton. He served through several enlistments as a soldier of the Revolution. His eldest child, Peter Gale, born 26 January 1780 in Royalton, married 27 January 1805 Hannah Frothingham of Westminster. Their eldest child, Hiram Gale, born 6 February 1808 in Barre, lived at Waterbury, Vermont; married 1 January 1833 Sally Bryant of Waterbury, daughter of Samuel Bryant, Esq., of that town. George Washington Gale, who married Alice Adelia Bunn, was their fifth child. Children:

288 i Lucy Gale, born 1868

 ii Harold Bunn Gale, born 10 July 1870, died 21 May 1872

 iii Minnie Gale, born 7 December 1876 at Galesville, married 26 January 1923 at Sacramento, California, George Albert John, who was born 18 March 1867 at Woodbury, Minnesota, now living in Rio Linda, California; no issue

- iv Helen Gale, born 6 May 1876 at Galesville, married 5 November 1906 at Minneapolis Harry Raymond Kelsey, born 13 December 1877 at Altoona, Pennsylvania, son of Benjamin Franklin and Mary Otilla (Askew) Kelsey. Mr. Kelsey is an electrician employed by the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie railroad, and has erected a home in Minneapolis; is a member of the Modern Woodman of America; no issue

Frances Adelaide Bunn, born 6 December 1851 in Mansfield, New York, married 1 May 1872 at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, William Luke Cummings, who was born 7 September 1848 in Bloomfield, Walworth County, Wisconsin, son of Israel Perkins and Mary Priscilla (Hale) Cummings. Israel P. Cummings was born 12 February 1819 at Springfield, Massachusetts, and his wife was born 6 November 1816 in the same city. Both were employed in a cotton mill at Springfield, and moved west about 1845, to improve their opportunities. From Walworth County, they moved to Waushara County, later to Clark County, all in same State. In 1861 they left the lumber country and settled on a homestead near Whitehall, in Trempealeau County, where Mrs. Cummings died 23 April 1870. After her death, her husband moved to the southern part of the country, and died 9 April 1898 at Trempealeau.

William Luke Cummings was a teacher in early life as was, also, his wife. He filled the office of superintendent of schools in Trempealeau County and, after removing to Oregon, was a member of the state legislature. For many years his residence was at Salem, in that State, where he was engaged in the real estate business until failing health compelled him to retire. He died 18 April 1928 at his home in Salem, after a long illness. His widow resides with her son, William Alson Cummings, in that city

An intimate friend said of him: "He never seemed like an old man, he was so young in spirit. He kept in touch with young people; no child was too small to be noticed and loved; all the children, in passing his house, would watch to see if he sat in the window; if he did they were sure he would wave and smile at them." The Oregon Statesman of 4 May 1928 contained this notice of Mr. Cummings' long and useful life: "In his 20th year he commenced teaching and was in school work more than 30 years. In 1884 he was elected superintendent of schools in Trempealeau county, to which position he was three times re-elected, thus serving in that capacity eight years.

In the latter part of 1893 Mr. Cummings moved with his family to Oregon where he procured a tract of land, set out a prune orchard and started a home at Shaw, Marion county. He continued teaching school, and still had a lively interest in the political conditions of the country, and in 1898 he was elected to represent Marion county in the Oregon legislature, and it was said of him, 'he was one of the most forcible speakers and most conscientious legislators in the house.'

In April, 1899, he was appointed as teacher in the Oregon state reform school for boys, and was in that institution four years, teaching the upper class boys during the week and conducting the chapel exercises each Sunday. In the autumn of 1907 he moved his family to Salem for high school privileges for the youngest son and daughter, the older ones having established homes of their own. Here he started the "Square Deal Realty company," and continued in that work till the spring of 1924, when he was stricken with pneumonia, after which he was unable to carry on the business and was obliged to turn it over to others.

He suffered much for four years, yet was always patient and genial, and loved to meet his friends, who were legion. At the age of 16 he united with the Methodist church and when in health was faithful in attendance at church and Sunday school. He passed from this life April 18, 1928. There are 17 grandchildren, one brother, two sisters, many relatives and a host of friends left to mourn his loss."

A friend wrote the following lines at his death:

TRIBUTE TO W. L. CUMMINGS

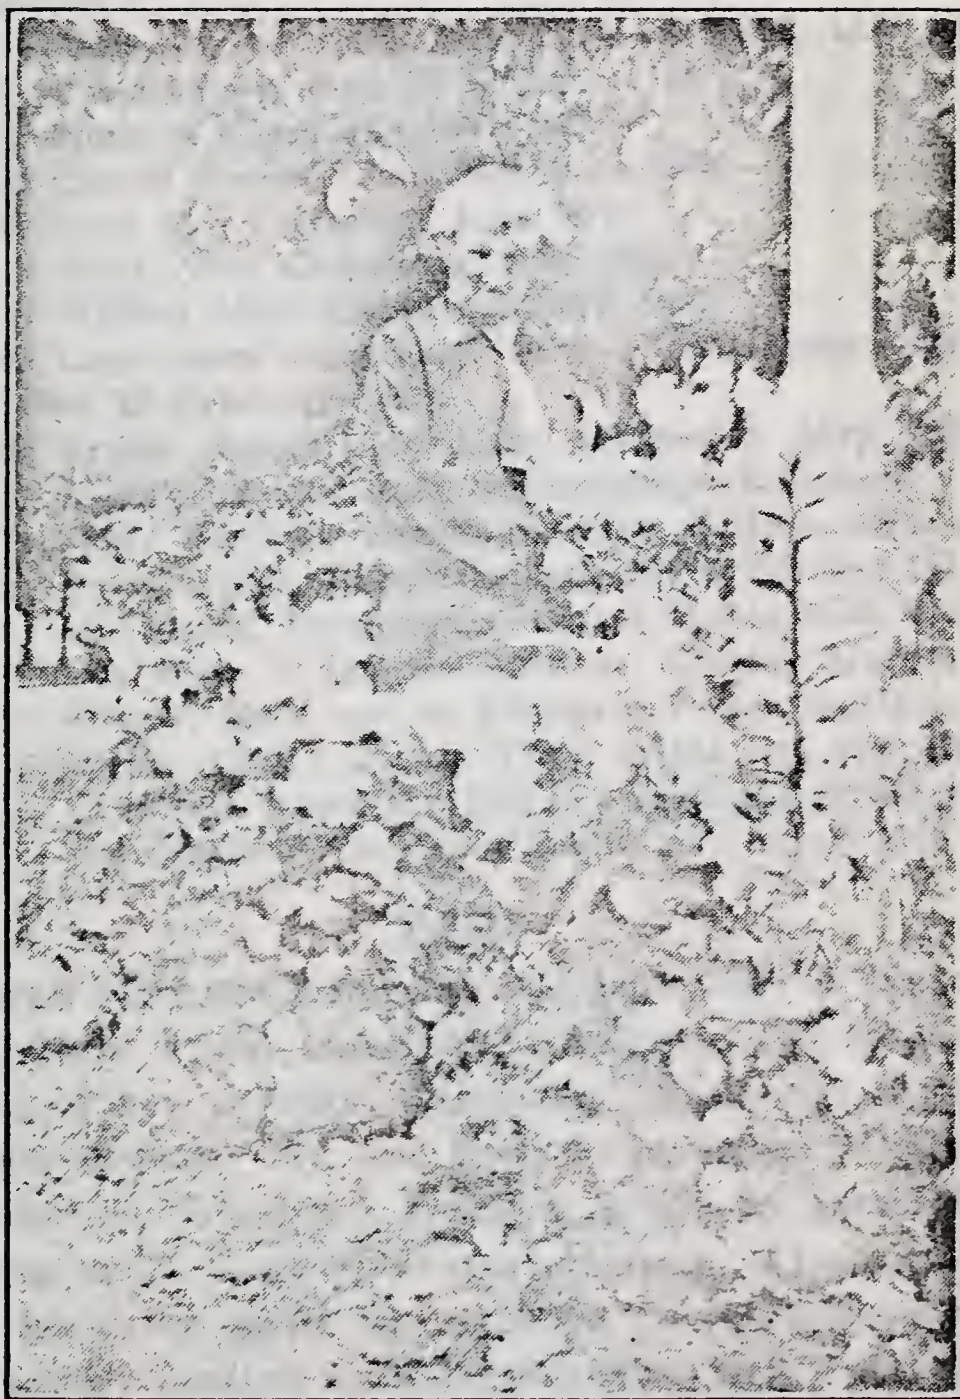

(By Edna Garfield)

A vision have I of noble deeds,
Done unpretentious and unaware,
By Human exponent of Christian creeds—
A character noble, deep and rare.

From sturdy home of pioneer,
Yet he carved his way to true success;
Incapable of thin veneer;
His highest aim, the world to bless.

A noble figure among men;
Responsive heart when joy was rife,
With sympathies like Son of Man's
In human tragedies of life.

He turned his talents unto God;
On life's broad highway faltered not;
A Christian, patriot way he trod;
His modesty no honors sought.

Our homes and churches, courts and schools.
 He loved, and served unselfishly;
 And close he walked with God who rules—
 Such influence lives eternally.”

Sarah Florence Bunn, born 17 June 1854 in Mansfield, New York, married 20 August 1879 at the home of her parents, Galesville, Wisconsin, Sippi Jacobs Hofma. He was born 8 November 1850 in Sexbierum, Friesland, Holland, a son of Jacob R. Hofma and Crintje (Dykstra) Hofma. At an early age he came with his parents to America, and the family located on a farm in the Town of Holland, La Crosse County, Wisconsin. The son was educated in the public school and Galesville University, and taught several terms in the La Crosse County schools. In 1880 he located near his wife's people on a homestead in Kingsbury County, South Dakota, and soon took prominent place among the public spirited citizens of the Territory; was prominent in the Farmers' Alliance movement and in the political campaigns of the so-called People's party, in the early 90's, as an organizer and lecturer. He sought no office for himself, but worked for what he conceived to be the benefit of the farmer. Having secured his farm in Dakota, he sold it and removed to Bellingham, Washington, later settling at Salem, Oregon, where he has a small plot of ground producing fine fruits and vegetables. Children:

- 299 i Silbyl Alice Hofma, born 1881
 ii Elwood Bunn Hofma, born 22 November 1882, resides in Utah; married Marie Switzler, no further record
 iii Laura Isabel Hofma, born 3 June 1884 in Kingsbury County, Dakota, contracted an unfortunate marriage with her cousin, George Washington Gale, Junior, which terminated in divorce; no issue

Romanzo Norton Bunn, eldest son of Delavan Bunn and Lucy Ann (Hollister) Bunn, was born 19 February 1856 in the Town of Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York, and was three years old when his father located on a farm near Trempealeau, Wisconsin, in the spring of 1859. This was a new settlement upon the banks of the Mississippi river, which provided transportation, in summer by steamboats on the river and in winter by teaming on the ice. The ice formed to great thickness and was generally regarded as reasonably safe, though occasional drownings occurred through driving into "air holes." Upon the railroad from the east reaching the bank of the Mississippi, waiting for the completion of a draw bridge in order to connect with the Winona & St Peter line, a track was laid on the ice and used for crossing with trains, throughout an entire winter.

Nowadays, children are largely regarded as a liability to the parents; in those days and upon the farm, by the time a boy was ten years old, he became a most decided asset, doing, practically, a man's work at many jobs on the farm. As a youth, he whose name heads this paragraph attended a little country school and Galesville University, a small institution operated at that time by the Methodist Conference. His leisure time was spent in reading scientific and historical works and the best literature obtainable. He had little use for the trashy novels within his reach. In spite of the arguments of those about him, he espoused the cause of evolution as early as 1876, when Charles Darwin and his works seem first to have become known in this country. For a time he set foot upon the "stepping stone" to a career so often utilized by the ambitious youth—teaching, he says with indifferent success: "The field of his labors was in La Crosse and Trempealeau Counties, in Wisconsin, and the pay was never more than $40 per month. Early he joined the rush for Dakota lands and located, first, in 1879, at Flandreau, and next year joined other members of the family in entering a tract of about 2,000 acres of land along the new Chicago & Northwestern railroad line, then in course of construction across Kingsbury County. The places mentioned were then in the Territory of Dakota, now in the State of South Dakota. Upon the organization of Kingsbury County, Mr. Bunn held official positions in both town and county, serving for some time as County Auditor, and altogether covering a period of about eight years. In 1892 he moved to Chicago, Illinois, where he has since resided. For some time he served "Uncle Sam," in the Chicago postoffice. Upon the incorporation of the B. H. Bunn Company, manufacturer of the Bunn Package Tying Machine, he became its secretary and treasurer, continuing thus to the present time. In a note below is given in his own words a graphic account of the early experiences of the pioneer. Life member Illinois Society, Sons of the Revolution, holding the office of Historian therein. He married 2 September 1884 at Detroit, Michigan, Mary Majesta Murdock, born 15 May 1857 at Granville, Addison County, Vermont, daughter of Charles Murdock and Emeline Palmer (Harris) Murdock. Residence, 9970 Charles street, Chicago. Charles Murdock was the inventor of barrel-making machinery, which brought him some fame and considerable recompense. Children:

- 300 i Charles Montgomery Bunn, born 1886
- 301 ii Benjamin Harrison Bunn, born 1887
- iii Romanzo Norton Bunn, born 8 January 1889 at DeSmet, Dakota Territory, died in first year
- 302 iv Harry Edward Bunn, born 1893

I am the fourth child and eldest son of Delavan Bunn and Lucy Anna (Hollister) Bunn, born on my father's farm in Mansfield Township, Cattaraugus County, New York, 19 February 1856, was named first in honor of Uncle Romanzo Bunn and, second, Uncle Norton Hollister, whose mother was of the Norton family of Connecticut.

When a child of three years the family moved to Trempealeau, Wisconsin, then a new settlement on the banks of the Mississippi river. The new farm was located on the prairies, about two miles from the nearest point to the river, and a little farther from the village. The move had been made by rail as far as Prairie du Chien, with a stop of a few weeks at the home of Uncle Truman Hollister, on the banks of the Rock river near Janesville, Wisconsin. From Prairie du Chien to Trempealeau the trip was made by steamer, there being at that time no railroad. Indeed it was not till many years later that the subject of this sketch became familiar with railroad transportation.

This family had been preceded at this settlement by Attorney, afterwards United States Judge Romanzo Bunn, and by Mr. Bunn's brother-in-law,

Rev. David O. Van Slyke. The farm was purchased at a price of about five dollars per acre, the building of a substantial house, which still stands, and the breaking of soil to be cropped the following year, began at once. To the farmer who had been accustomed to the stumps and stones of the Alleghany region, the turning of a furrow a half mile long with nothing to interfere was a great relief.

Among the child's early recollections was the marching away of the recruits, on the first call of President Lincoln, and particularly of the two Uncles Charles and Frank Bunn, who never came back. Another recollection is of the hundreds of "covered wagons" which at that time were pulling for Minnesota points.

Life here for the first twenty years was not particularly different from that of pioneers in general. However, convenience to market gave the settler a great advantage over those located farther back, who often hauled their produce a three days' journey for the round trip, over roads which permitted of but a light load, whereas from this farm a single horse team could deliver three loads of sixty bushels of wheat each in one day.

Steamboating was then the great business on the river, and the farm boy knew each individual boat by the sound of its whistle, as they signaled their approach to the several landings.

Farm work began for the boys early in life, as a matter of course, and schooling was soon practically confined to the four months' winter term. Following a team along twenty miles of furrow per day throughout the plowing season was the lot of this boy from the age of nine years, as were all classes of labor he had the physical strength to endure. Today he feels certain that this work never injured him.

To assume, however, that there was no chance for enjoyment would be a mistake. The landscape here was one of the most beautiful imaginable. Rugged bluffs rising to a height of 300 to 500 feet above this prairie, line both sides. For those who cared for it, there was hunting, fishing, boating, and all outdoor sports.

The neighborhood was largely Yankee, with a sprinkling of English, Scotch, Irish and German, while numbers of Poles and Scandinavians were making good on the less desirable lands farther from market.

The fourth of July was ushered in by a salute to the states individually, fired by anvils, which began echoing along the bluffs at three o'clock in the morning, the last of the fire works going off at 10 P. M., and fire crackers popping all the long day. There was the full two days attendance at the county fair, regarded as the most wonderful show, and the rare occasion when Dan Rice or John Robinson steamed up the river, set up the "Big Top", paraded the elephants and camels, while the lion roared his protest over the breaking of his nap. At the circus in the afternoon the animal cages lined one side of the ring, while the seats occupied the other side, so that attention was divided between bespangled lady bare-back rider and the antics in the monkeys' cage.

But later, when railroad connection was made and P. T. Barum's "Greatest Show on Earth" actually came into the larger town across the river with three long trains, including his wonderful museum, menagerie, and hippodrome, the boy was in paradise indeed.

The one room district school had at best but few pupils, and boon companions were scarce. There was an aloofness between the farm boy and the village boy, who seems to have been much more

"stuck on himself" than conditions would reasonably warrant. However, to the studious boy who cared so little for sports as to be dubbed "The Old Man" by his father, the lack of enough to play any ball game beyond "Two Old Cat" or "Ante Over" was not noticed.

There were many calls at the farm by neighboring representatives of the Winnebago Indian tribe, and when the boys skated upon Trempealeau Bay these visits were returned at the wigwam of Morgan, whose son, Little George, would show his markmanship with the arrow by shooting pennies from a split stick, provided the pennies were forthcoming.

Alson Hollister Bunn, born 8 May 1860 at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, was reared on the paternal farm at that place, and was educated at Galesville University. At the age of 21 years he entered a homestead claim in Kingsbury County, (now) South Dakota, in the neighborhood of his father, brother, Jason Lee Noyes and other family connections, and has followed agriculture most of his life. For some time he was occupied with carpenter work, and is now a fruit grower at Salem, Oregon, where he purchased a site. He is a member of the First M. E. Church of Salem, and of the Modern Woodmen of America. Politically, he adheres to principles of the Democratic party; married 29 November 1883 at DeSmet, South Dakota, Carrie Ellen Noyes, born 21 September 1865 at Diana, Lewis County, New York, daughter of Jason Lee and Leve Jane (Munger) Noyes. Children:

- i Harold Noyes Bunn, born 31 December 1892 at DeSmet, lives at Salem, Oregon; married Fern La Valleur; no issue
- ii Mildred Bunn, born 15 December 1901 at Lebanon, Oregon, lives at Salem in that State, wife of Herbert Nash; no issue

243

Laura Celina Bunn, was born 17 August 1865 at Trempealeau, and accompanied her father's family to the homestead home in Dakota. There she met and was married (1) 28 November 1883 to Erwin Anderson Noyes, who was born 17 January 1861 at Diana, Lewis County, New York, died 31 December 1883, son of Jason Lee and Leve Jane (Munger) Noyes. Jason Lee Noyes was born 10 January 1839 in Diana, and was named for the missionary, Jason Lee, who founded the first Methodist Episcopal Church on the Pacific coast, at Salem, Oregon. Mr. Noyes was a carpenter and farmer. In 1880 he went to Dakota Territory, and settled on a homestead about six miles from those of the Bunns. His last years were spent at Salem, Oregon, where he was a member of the Church founded by Jason Lee at the time of his death, 21 April 1913. He married 11 December 1859 Leve Jane Munger, who was born 8 May 1839 and died May 21 1913, daughter of Andrew and Hannah (Dick) Munger. Edwin A. Noyes died 31 December 1883, after a short illness, leaving as widow a bride of one month, at the age of 18 years. She was permitted to reenter his homestead claim, by law, and lived with her husband's family. She married (2) 29 Novemer 1886 Oren Arthur Noyes, brother of her first husband. He was born 15 July 1863 in Diana, New York, and was a homesteader in Dakota with his father and brother. He was reared on a dairy farm in Diana and was accustomed to assist in maple sugar making. All his active life was devoted to farming, in Dakota and Oregon, until 1919, when he retired and resides in Salem, latter State, where he purchased a home. His Dakota farm consisted of a half-section, devoted to small grains, and he continued the same on his Oregon farm of 135

247-B

Ella Bunn, born 29 February 1876, at Galesville, was an accomplished teacher, and died, unmarried, near Westmore, Montana 27 November 1910; her death was caused by typhoid fever. The following extract from the Baker Sentinel of Baker, Montana, indicates the esteem in which she was held: "Miss Bunn had been the teacher of the Baker school since its opening in September. She had taught school for sixteen years, several of which were at Andover, South Dakota, just prior to coming to Montana—her last year there closing last June. She was the occupant of an excellent half-section near Westmore, in whose development she took much pride. Though of a quiet and retiring disposition, Miss Bunn was popular with her acquaintances, all of whom regard her demise as a personal loss."

Clarence Alonzo Bunn, born 3 September 1874 at Mt. Vision, in the Town of Laurens, Otsego County, New York, one of the seventeen children of Henry Clay Bunn, was educated in the public school near his birthplace. The father was a merchant and postmaster at Mt. Vision, and the son assisted in the store and postoffice, ran errands, sold papers, and followed various useful occupations open to a boy of those days. When fourteen years of age he operated a stage and freight line, making daily trips to Oneonta and return. At the age of seventeen, he operated a similar line between Oneonta and Richfield Springs, in his own name. He acted successively as motorman and conductor on the trolley line between Oneonta and Herkimer. After tilling rented land, in 1907 he purchased the original Bunn homestead, on "Bunn Hill," at South Hartwick, which had been the estate of his great-grandfather Jacob Bunn; this passed out of the family in the time of his grandfather. This now embraces 138 acres and is operated as dairy farm, lying beautifully on a gentle slope and containing not more than two or three acres on which a tractor can not be used. From 18 to 22 cows are kept, and the farm is in excellent condition. Mr. Bunn has been active in various social and business lines, and is esteemed as a useful citizen. He is a member of the Methodist Church at Hartwick; of Harwick Lodge, No. 271, I. O. O. F., of which he is a Past Grand, also a Past District Deputy Grand Master; is a Past Chancellor of the local lodge of Maccabees. A sound Republican, he has served as a member of the Election Board; as Supervisor and Town Collector. He is secretary of the Hartwick

Town Insurance Company, and was secretary of the New Lisbon Farm Telephone Company. He married 27 July 1898 Jennie Elizabeth Field, born 3 November 1874 on "Dutch Hill", in the Town of Milford, Otsego County, New York, daughter of Hezekiah and Abigail (Carl) Field. The writer can testify that Mrs. Bunn is a capable housekeeper and helpmeet; she is active in the Hartwick Rebekah Lodge and the Methodist Church. Children, all residing with parents in 1927:

- i Milton Clarence Bunn, born 19 July 1900

Melvin David Van Slyke, son of Augustus Peter Van Slyke, born 3 May 1876 at Trempealeau, Wisconsin, attended school in District No. 7 of that town. At the age of 21 years he made his start in life by beginning work as a farm laborer, at a wage of fifteen dollars per month. By saving his earnings, he was able to pursue the short course in Agriculture at the University of Wisconsin and graduated 1900. For some years he followed general farming as a proprietor, and operated a blacksmith shop at the same time, especially in winter. After disposing of his farm, he settled at Lone Rock, Iowa County, Wisconsin, where he owns and operates a shop, and also owns his home. A new industry adopted in the spring of 1928 is the hatching and sale of baby chicks. In religious faith, Mr. Van Slyke sympathizes with the Methodist Church. He is not under any party lash, and uses his best judgment in choice of candidates, regardless of party affiliations; has never sought office, but has served as clerk of his school district four years, and is a member of the village board of Lone Rock; is a member of the Mystic Workers of the World; married 5 November 1902 at Arcadia, Trempealeau County, Wisconsin, Sarah Eveline Newcomb, daughter of Isaac and Emeline (Thurston) Newcomb. Children:

Nellie Myrtle Stearns, born 1 January 1876 at Trempealeau, Wisconsin; married 1 January 1897 Herbert E. Van Schaick, born 5 February 1869, son of Stephen and Hannah (Griffin) Van Schaick.

Herbert Ellsworth Van Schaick was born 5 February 1869 in Arcadia, Trempealeau County, Wisconsin, son of Stephen Henry Van Schaick and Hannah Marilla Griffin, his wife. The name of Van Schaick is of Dutch origin and is a place name. When men were ordered to assume surnames, many took their place of nativity or residence as a base. Van in Dutch is equivalent to the German "Von," meaning of or from. William Van Schaick came from Holland and, after a residence in New York, removed to the West. He had a large family and most of his sons remained in New York. One of these was named William Henry, and had a son of same name who was captain of the ill-fated "Slocum," which sank with heavy loss of life, many years ago. Stephen H. Van Schaick was the youngest child of William Van Schaick, and was a farmer at Arcadia. His wife, Hannah M. Griffin, was born 23 January 1847 in Pennsylvania, and died in October 1919 at the home of her son at Summit, South Dakota. Her parents were Tyler Griffin and Mahitable Douglas, the latter of Scotch parentage, her mother a native of Scotland, maiden name Agard. Stephen H. Van Schaick was a member of the Baptist Church and a Republican. Stephen H. Van Schaick had children; Herbert Ellsworth of Dimsdale, Alberta; Jennie and Effie, deceased; Frank Eugene of Summit, South Dakota; Mary Edna, born 20 July 1879; Clara Edna, born 20 July 1882, married Fred E. Merle; William Tyler, born 10 June 1889 married Elizabeth Steenberg, resides Wilmot, South Dakota, has daughter Mavis Elaine, born 9 August 1923.

Herbert E. Van Schaick completed the eighth grade course in school at Lake Preston, South Dakota, and has always been associated with agriculture, independently since the age of 26 years. For a time he occupied a homestead at Greenlawn, Alberta, Canada, and in 1912 moved to Grand Prairie, same province, traveling 250 miles with oxen, from Edmonton thro' timber and swamps, three years before the arrival of a railroad in the section. Disposing of the homestead at Greenlawn, he purchased "scrip", which is equivalent to homestead right; is now the owner of a half-section of land, and rents an equal amount, and breeds pure-blood swine and sheep. He is a member and deacon of the Baptist Church, and for ten years has been a trustee and secretary-treasurer of the Percy school district of Grand Prairie. Children:

i Floyd Raymond Van Schaick, born 3 April 1898 in

Oldham, South Dakota; enlisted at the age of 20 in the World War, went to England, but did not reach France; attended Kahki College and Baptist College at Brandon, received degree of A. B. from McMaster's University; is engaged in teaching and is (1928) principal of Nordegg high school at Alberta, a mining town; has a homestead near his parents

ii Chester Wilbur Van Schaick, born 14 November 1899 at Oldham, farmer on homestead near parents

iii Glen Eugene Van Schaick, born 3 August 1902, at Summit, South Dakota, is farmer on homestead near parents

iv Foster Osmer Van Schaick, born 29 November 1907 at Camrose, Alberta

v Clifton Henry Van Schaick, born 4 July 1911 at Greenlawn, Alberta

None of these has used liquor or tobacco.

Charles Montgomery Bunn, son of Romanzo Norton Bunn and Mary Majesta Murdock, his wife, born 18 October 1886, in the Town of Spirit Lake, Kingsbury County, Dakota Territory, is a graduate of the University of Illinois, with degree of Electrical Engineer, and resides in Chicago, where he is engaged in selling lighting fixtures, etc. He played base ball on the University team during the season when the team made the unsurpassed record of winning fourteen games and losing none. He is an enthusiastic golfer and bowler. He married 11 May 1911 at Chicago, Mary Elizabeth Wingetter, from whom he is now divorced. One daughter, Muriel Ruth Bunn, born 3 February 1914.

Benjamin Harrison Bunn, son of Romanzo Norton Bunn was born 18 October 1887 at DeSmet, Dakota Territory, now State of South Dakota. His birthplace is the county seat of Kingsbury County, where his father Romanzo Norton Bunn, held the office of County Auditor at the time of his birth. He was five years of age when his parents brought him to Chicago, and his education was supplied by the schools of the city and the University of Illinois. As a boy, he demonstrated characteristics which have made him a leader among inventors. While other boys were at play he was engaged in some kind of constructive endeavor, such as making a kite or other toy. This bent being noted by his father, he was early placed in a school which featured mechanical instruction, the Chicago Manual Training High School. Though this was a long distance from his home, the boy gladly made the long daily trips, which included considerable walking, to secure instruction along lines corresponding to his inclination. While employed in the Chicago postoffice, the father was impressed by the need of some mechanism for tying packages, of which many went out of the postoffice daily. This was mentioned to the son, who immediately began experiments and study with view of producing such a machine. After finishing the high school, he entered the University of Illinois, where he continued only one year, in order that he might give his whole time to the perfection of his machine, now known over a large portion of the world as the Bunn Package Tying Machine. It is employed by all sorts of manufacturers or assemblers whose wares are placed on the market, or in hands of patrons, tied in packages. The first purchasers of the machines were the Postoffice Departments of the United States and Canada, and this placed the manufacture on a sound financial basis, which it has held continuously since. Among the first to introduce its use generally were printers and lithographers, who tied up printed matter for delivery, and carton makers who tied their wares in packages. Its use is very widely spread at the present time, and continually growing, saving those in a hundred lines of business a very considerable amount of time and labor. New models are constantly opening new fields, and the market increases accordingly. United States patents based on Mr. Bunn's work were issued 17 September 1912, 19 May 1914, 19 October 1916 and 5 November 1926. Numerous foreign patents have also been issued.

For four years he gave nearly his entire time to experimental work, carried on in the garret of his home. On the incorporation of the B. H. Bunn Company, Mr. B. H. Bunn became its president, in which position he has continued to the present time. He is a man of fine disposition, of tall and slender build, a clear thinker, of great adaptability along mechanical lines. He is fond of athletics, especially golf. He is a life member of the Illinois Society Sons of the Revolution; member of the Collegiate Club of Chicago; Beverly Hills University Club; Prairie Club; Euclid Hills Golf Club; and the great Masonic fraternity. His religious affiliations are with the Protestant Episcopal Church. Mr. Bunn was married 10 September 1921 to Miss Jessie Alice McWhorter, daughter of the late John Alexander McWhorter of Chicago. They are the parents of a daughter, Jean Mary Bunn, born 7 November 1925 at Chicago.

Martin Hesler Bunn, youngest child of Richard Bunn, only child of his second wife, Lucinda W. Hesler, was born 6 June 1850 in Volney and died 16 February 1910 in Syracuse, same State. He attended grammar and private schools; his ambition was to become a physician, but his health was not sufficiently rugged to endure the rigid preparation required, so he turned his attention to the law; he studied with Judge Horace Howland of Auburn, New York, and was admitted to the bar at Rochester about 1878. At the age of 21 years he learned telegraphy and his first position in that capacity was at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. For several years he practiced law at Port Byron, New York, adding, after first two years, life and fire insurance; in the fall of 1893 he moved to Syracuse, having become affiliated with a National Building & Loan Association three years previously, and became manager of the loan department, with headquarters at Syracuse. This arrangement continued twelve years, at the end of which time he resigned because of inroads upon his health. To occupy his mind, he became interested in photography and bought out a studio in Syracuse, which he operated until his death, 16 February 1910. While resident at Port Byron, he was an active member of the Methodist Church, and transferred his membership to the Furman Street Church of that faith in Syracuse. He was affiliated with the Masonic order at Port Byron, was an ardent fisherman and member of the Anglers' Club at Syracuse. His political support was given to Republican principles and policies. He possessed a fine musical voice, was extremely fond of music and played violin and cornet, and was leader of the choir of the Furman Street Church several years. He married 11 May 1880 at Port Byron, Alida Idella Homel, born there 28 November 1855, daughter of Egbert Homel, an undertaker at Port Byron, and his wife Huldah Jeffries. Children:

- i Mary Louise Bunn, born 31 August 1881 at Port Byron, married 27 January 1903 at Syracuse Warren Blakeslee, a farmer at Perryville, New York; they have a daughter, Amy Louise Blakeslee, born 12 September 1905 at Perryville.

THE ILLINOIS BUNNS

In ancient days, the Presbyterian Church in the Town of Alexandria, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, was occupied alternately by English-speaking and German-speaking (more likely Dutch) people. In this Church were recorded baptisms of several of Jacob Bunn's children. His wife's name constituted one of the most frequent English combinations of feminine names. There is nothing to indicate that his ancestry was other than English. In some of the baptismal records, the wife's name appears as Elizabeth, in some Maria, sometimes Maria Elizabeth. The record of her will gives the name Mary.

Jacob Bunn, born 1736, died 15 March 1808 in Alexandria, Hunterdon County, New Jersey. There can be no doubt that he was among the descendants of Matthew Bunn of Woodbridge, New Jersey, who spread over much of Hunterdon County in pioneer days. His wife, Mary Elizabeth, born 1744, died 9 May 1817. Her will follows:

The will of Mary Bunn, widow of Jacob Bunn of Alexandria Twp Hunterdon Co. N. J., dated 10 July 1816, disposes as follows:

Sons John Bunn and Henry Bunn 100 dollars each, which they are to pay to their children.

Grand children Mary Sigler, Jacob Sigler, Elizabeth Sigler, George Sigler, and Sarah Sigler 100 dollars each, to have their share.

Daughter Mary Rittenhouse and my son William Bunn 100 each.

Son Philip a bed.

Daughters Rosanna and Mary apparel, except to grand daughter Elizabeth the daughter of Henry Bunn a gown.

Son Jacob, a bed, etc, for giving me a home in my old age.

Live stock to be sold.

Grandsons Jacob Curtis and John Vanderbelt, the children of my daughter Rosanna, the rest when of age, and if they die then to my sons John, Henry, Jacob and William Bunn and the issue of my daughter Mary Rittenhouse.

Executor—Jacob Bunn.

Witnesses—Jno E. Forman
David Willet

Proved 7 June 1817

Inventory made 5 June 1817—Amount $2914.85

The baptisms of children, as appearing in Presbyterian Church records are as follows:

Elizabeth child of Jacob and Elizabeth born 17 September, baptized 16 October 1768

Jacob, son of Jacob and Maria Elizabeth, born 26 October 1770, baptized 4 January 1771

John Heinrich Bonn, son of Jacob and Maria Elizabeth, born 4 October 1772, baptized 16 November 1772

Matheis Bonn, son of Jacob and Mary Elizabeth, baptized 2 May 1780

John William, son of Jacob and Mary Elizabeth Bunn, born 29 May, baptized 5 July 1787

It is apparent that some of these records were made by Dutch rule and some by English; in the first, the name was spelled Bohn, and in the second, Bon. This offers no evidence that Jacob Bunn was Dutch, but shows that the record was made by a Dutch recorder. Perhaps the earlier records were made before English-speaking people had begun using the church. The family did not use the Dutch form under which children were recorded in the Church, which is the best evidence that they were of English extraction. The one recorded as John Heinrich appears in family records as Henry Bunn, born 1772; the one recorded as Jacob, appears as

John P. Bunn, born 1770. Following is the family record:

- 349 i John P. Bunn, born 1770
- 350 ii Henry Bunn, born 1772
- 351 iii Rosanna Bunn, born 1774
- iv Jacob Bunn, born 7 March 1776, died 19 July 1851.
 His wife, Lydia Carhart, was born 18 July 1793 and died 28 March 1852; a child, Caroline Foreman
 Bunn, born 17 September 1826, married Samuel V.
 Eckel, born 25 November 1825, and lived at Little York, New Jersey; they had three children; no record found
- 352 v Mary Elizabeth Bunn, born 1778
- vi Matthias Bunn, born 8 February 1780, baptized 2
 May 1780, at Presbyterian church of Alexandria, died 1 January 1799
- vii Philip Bunn, born 5 May 1783, died unmarried; was

Jacob Bunn, eldest son of Henry and Mary (Sigler) Bunn, born 18 March 1814 in Henterdon County, New Jersey, died 16 October 1897 in Springfield, Illinois. He settled at Springfield in early manhood and in 1840 engaged in the banking business, under the private system then in operation. With faith in the resources of the country, he extended credit to farmers over a wide area, with real estate as security, and his business grew to large dimensions. In the depression that pervaded the country in 1873 and succeeding years, values became so shrunken that Mr. Bunn found himself overloaded with slow assets and he was obliged to go into voluntary liquidation 1 January 1878. His debts amounted to $800,000, and his assets largely exceeded that sum in actual value; however, forced sales so reduced them that depositors received but 71-1-2 percent of their claims. After liquidation, Mr. Bunn was discharged from further legal liability, but he felt morally obligated for the balance and entertained the hope that he might be able to pay the remaining 28-1-2 percent. His remaining years were devoted to that purpose, but he was doomed to disappointment, and died in 1897 without accomplishing it. Among the enterprises which he organized with a view to raising funds for his purpose was the Illinois Watch Company, still functioning under the management of Bunn heirs. His children were in complete sympathy with his wishes in the matter and, after his death, they organized the Bunn Memorial Trust, for the purpose of carrying out his plans. After a period of 48 years, they succeeded; without any legal obligation or any element of compulsion, they carried out what they considered a solemn duty, and issued a notice, in December 1925, that all creditors of Jacob Bunn would be paid in full, with interest at 5% per annum. Their number was nearly 5,000 and a large part of the expense of liquidation was caused by the difficulty of locating heirs of many of the creditors. The Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society said, in January 1926, "The action of Mr. Bunn's children at this time is indeed remarkable. It appeals not to the mind alone but to the heart. Justice, kindness, honor, benevolence, lend the genuine Christmas spirit to this magnificent gift. Miss Alice Bunn, George W. Bunn, Henry Bunn and Jacob Bunn, Jr., the four living children of Jacob Bunn, Sr., have honored not only themselves and their father, but have brought honor to Springfield, Illinois, their home. To Jacob Bunn and his descendants a debt was a matter of honor. Who will say that this was not a finer achievement than the accumulation of any fortune, however large? They have written a chapter into the history of Springfield and Illinois as inspirational as it is remarkable—a chapter illuminated by the light of honor which reflects it beautifully against the background of selfishness and greed of this money-mad age of material progress." Jacob Bunn married 17 April 1851 Elizabeth Jane Ferguson born 12 May 1832 in Springfield, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Ferguson; she died 20 November 1886. Children:

362-A

John Whitfield Bunn, third son of Henry and Mary (Sigler) Bunn, was born 21 June 1831 in Hunterdon County, New Jersey, and spent his boyhood on a farm near Milford, in the Town of Holland, in that county. At the age of 16 years, in 1847, he joined his elder brother Jacob Bunn at Springfield, Illinois, and became a clerk in the latter's wholesale grocery house; in 1858 he became a partner in the establishment, then styled "J. & J. W. Bunn Company," later known as J. W. Bunn & Company. While on a visit to his childhood home, the elder brother described the Illinois country as one where one might go over several large fields without finding enough stones to fill a wheelbarrow; to the fifteen-year-old boy, who often must engage in picking stones off the field, to prepare it for cultivation and furnish material for fence, this offered alluring prospects, and young John, besought his brother to take him west with himself. A year later, this wish was granted, and the future banker and friend of Lincoln began his most interesting career. His acquaintance with Lincoln began almost immediately, as the latter was attorney for Jacob Bunn, and they were frequently brought in contact, John W. Bunn becoming one of the closest friends Lincoln ever had. The Lincoln and Bunn families were intimate; Mrs. Jacob Bunn was a very handsome and stately woman, often described as "queenly"; she was an admirable hostess and often entertained Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln; John W. Bunn was a frequent guest at the Lincoln home. When Lincoln was nominated for president John W. Bunn was one of the group of ten men each of whom contributed five hundred dollars to a campaign fund to further the Lincoln cause. It is probable that, as the campaign progressed, these same men contributed more. Mr. Bunn was spokesman and disbursing agent. It was not until Lincoln was about to start for Washington that he learned the identity of the group or the amount expended; then, upon his insistence, Mr. Bunn told him. Though not a politician, Mr. Bunn was often called to the public service, where his judgment, experience and knowledge of human nature proved valuable. He was city treasurer in 1857-8-9; from 1858 to 1898 he was treasurer of the State Board of Agriculture; from 1861 to 1865 he was pension agent for the State of Illinois, appointed by President Lincoln; he served as treasurer of the University of Illinois from its organization in 1868 to 1893, and was a member of the Republican State Committee from 1872 to 1876 and from 1900 to 1902. In 1871 he became a partner in the wholesale boot and shoe business of M. Selz & Company, of Chicago, holding the office of vice-president several years before his death, 17 June 1920. In 1903 he became president of the Springfield Marine Bank. He was a member of the Chicago and Union League Clubs of Chicago and of the Sangamon and Illini Clubs of Springfield. "The full story of his good deeds will never be told."

In the matter of civic affairs, he was Springfield's leading philanthropist, and nearly every public building in the city owes something to his generosity; this is especially true of the Lincoln Library. Years before this was built, he assisted in establishing a subscription library which was open to the public, and took an active interest in its management and care. When the Lincoln Library was founded and built, Mr. Bunn was made president of the board of directors, in which capacity he continued until 1917. Many a successful business man owes his rise in fortune to Mr. Bunn's assistance in early struggles. Many a young lad was given an education which never would have been his but for the generosity of John W. Bunn, and many a widow with children to rear and educate remembers him with gratitude.

William Conover Bunn, eldest child of John E. Bunn and Sarah Conover, was born 10 February 1837 in Bethlehem, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, and died 18 January 1906 in Byron, Ogle County, Illinois. He was an early resident of the Town of Marion, south of Byron, where he had a farm of 200 acres that he tilled several years; he took part in the organization of a farmers' co-operative association, which erected an elevator at the railroad station in Byron, and became its manager; in time he purchased the stock of others and became sole owner and operator. In 1891 he established the Farmers' and Merchants' bank at Byron, which has now been consolidated with the Byron State Bank, and is managed by his son. He was a sound business man, which led to his selection as manager of the elevator, and his election to official stations in the town. While not affiliated with any religious organization he was a consistent supporter of the Church, favoring the Congregational in faith. In politics, he was a Republican. He married 8 March 1862 at Byron, Julia Catherine Jarvar, born 18 July 1844, at Saugerties, Ulster County, New York, daughter of Anthony and Mary Magdalen (Snyder) Jarvar. The name Jarvar is of French origin. Mary M. Snyder, born 1822, died 1849, was the daughter of Jeremiah E. Snyder and Catherine H. Van Vlierden, both of Dutch ancestry. She is buried in Katsbahn cemetery, at Saugerties. Jeremiah E. Snyder was the son of Elias, and grandson of Captain Jeremiah Snyder, both Revolutionary soldiers. Catherine Van Vlierden was a daughter of Rev. Petrus Van Vlierden, a native of Holland, pastor of the Katsbahn Church. The ancestry of his family has been traced to 1180, and of the Snyder family to 1698. Children:

William Ferguson Bunn, born 18 March 1852, was a banker in Springfield, Illinois, unmarried. He died of heart failure 5 May 1925 at the LaSalle Hotel in Chicago; at that time he had retired from business and had lived a few years in Buffalo, New York; was on the way to visit Springfield when death overtook him; had been an extensive traveler since his retirement.

377

Henry Bunn, second son of Jacob and Elizabeth J. (Ferguson) Bunn, born 9 August 1858 in Springfield, Illinois, participated in the remarkable action of Jacob Bunn's children, in paying off the creditors of the unfortunate bank of his father. Like all members of the family, he is actively engaged in business in his native city, being now vice-president of the Illinois Watch Company, and vice-president of the Sangamon Electric Company. This family has never made any parade of its wealth, but has contributed to the support of Churches and other elevating influences of the city, and is interested in various industries of Central Illinois, active in promoting the growth and financial welfare of the region. Mr. Bunn is not married.

George Wallace Bunn, third son of Jacob and Elizabeth J. (Ferguson) Bunn, was born 13 January 1861 in Springfield, and has always been identified with the various undertakings of the family, which has done much for the growth and development of Central Illinois. He is at present, president of the Springfield Marine Bank, of J. W. Bunn & Company, the large wholesale grocery house founded by John Whitfield Bunn and his brother, Jacob Bunn; among the new undertakings established by modern Bunns, is the large candy factory located just west of the ancient site of the J. W. Bunn stores, and presided over by a son of George W. Bunn, operated in connection with the wholesale grocery business. He attends the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, is a Republican, and a business man before a politician. George Wallace Bunn married 14 October 1886 Ada Willard Richardson, who was born 13 September 1861 in Springfield, daughter of William D. and Lucy (Willard) Richardson, who came from New York to Illinois.

Children:

THE SOUTHERN ILLINOIS BUNNS

400

Benjamin Bunn, undoubtedly a descendant of Matthew Bunn of Woodbridge, New Jersey, first appears of record at Poughkeepsie, New York, where his eldest son was born. A record written by his grandson, Aaron Bunn, was recently discovered in Olney, Illinois, and affords the only clue to his nativity and movements. He was a blacksmith, and moved presumably because of prospects of greater call for his services. His descendants have been noted for their fealty to the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which several were local preachers. His wife's name was Elizabeth, and the record of their children as written by Aaron Bunn, is as follows:

"Olney Oct. 6th, 1861.

" "The following is an account of the times and "places of the nativity of the children of Benjamin
"Bunn and Elizabeth, his wife: there first born was
"a female who lived but a few months; the rest
"were as follows:

As New York never had a Middlesex County, and as there was never a section of that State known as "East New York," it is apparent that the writer of above record fell into a simple error in writing "Est New York," instead of East New Jersey (a widely used expression). Woodbridge, the seat of the beginnings of the Bunn family in New Jersey, is in Middlesex County, that State, and the facts cited above seem to show positively that Benjamin Bunn of Poughkeepsie came from that section, to which he returned after the birth of his eldest son, so that his daughter Phebe was born there. Then, his worldly prospects took him to Pennsylvania, thence to Maryland and what is now West Virginia. It is rather probable that his wife had a double name, Margaret Elizabeth, than that he had two wives. In the record of birth of Seeley Bunn, his mother is called Elizabeth, while that of his death calls her "Peggy," a colloquial form of Margaret; also, her death record calls her Margaret. These records would indicate that Benjamin Bunn, Sr., was born about 1740, at a period when all trace of descendants of Matthew Bunn is missing, owing to absence of any effort to preserve vital records in New Jersey, except such as may be found in Church records. There is a strong probability that the family name of Benjamin Bunn's wife was Seeley, since she gave that name to her eldest son. The presence of the name Miles among the sons strengthens the theory of connection with Middlesex County, New Jersey, as this name persists among the Bunns of that region through many generations. All sons of this family, except Seeley and Benjamin, died young. Rev. Seeley Bunn became a Methodist minister, and died, without issue, at Charletown, the seat of Jefferson County, West Virginia. Benjamin Bunn, lived in Huntingdon county, Pa., Washington county, Md., and about the year 1790, removed to what was then Berkeley county (W) Va. At that time Berkeley included the present Jefferson and Morgan counties. Exact location of Benjamin in that section (Md. and (W) Va.) has not been located. He died in Berkeley county, Va., as it was then, prior to April 15, 1795, when first order in estate was entered, appointing appraisers. No will is on file, but certain persons are referred to in final account as "one of the legatees." No record has been found to indicate that he owned land anywhere.

Benjamin Bunn, son of Benjamin and Margaret, was born 20 November 1781 in Washington County, Maryland, and was a pioneer settler in that part of Lawrence County, Illinois, now Richland County. He had previously been a pioneer settler in what is now Ashland County, Ohio, where he located in 1809. Alexander Finley, who is credited with being the first settler of that region, gave 17 April 1809 as date of his own arrival, and stated that Benjamin Bunn and two others arrived with their families a few weeks later. The census enumerator found Benjamin Bunn at Jeromesville, Ashland County, Ohio, in 1810. In 1812 he joined several neighbors in erecting a block house at Jeromesville, for mutual protection from Indian attacks. Bunn's farm was 2 1-2 miles southeast of Jeromesville, and the Hyatt family lived between those points. Bunn's wife was a member of the Hyatt family, and the Jeromesville neighborhood seems to have included several old acquaintances from West Virginia. Benjamin Bunn was married in August 1804 in Brooke County (West) Virginia to Margaret Hyatt, believed to be a descendant of Charles Hyatt, many of whose descendants have been traced, in Virginia and elsewhere. Most of their children were born in Ohio. In the autumn of 1838 Benjamin Bunn settled in what is now Richland County (then Lawrence) Town of Bompas, and erected on Section 1 of that town the first steam flour mill in the county. He seems to have been a blacksmith, as well as farmer, a local preacher of the Methodist Church, and died 9 January 1855. His body was laid to rest in Lone Tree Cemetery, later known as Prairieton Cemetery, within the limits of Lawrence County, near the Vincennes and St. Louis road. His wife was also buried there. All their children accompanied them to Illinois, or followed within a few years, and all secured land in Lawrence and Richland Counties. Children:

- i Hyatt Bunn, born 8 May 1805, settled in Lawrence County in 1838 later in Bompas, Richland County, married ——— Hazzard
- ii Phebe Bunn, sometimes written Isabel, born 21 January 1807, married Samuel Haines and lived in Bompas

- ix Abraham Miles Bunn, born 20 October 1871 at Arrowsmith, McLean County, Illinois, is a carpenter and contractor living at Arlington Heights, Cook County, Illinois; he married 5 December 1892 Mary Pitzer, and they have six children: Elmer, Ruth Ann, Francis, Bernice, Celia and Nettie. All are married except Bernice, who has long been a cripple, through spinal meningitis

454

Thomas Jefferson Bunn, second son of Lewis and Margery (Haines) Bunn, was born 29 August 1832 in Greene County, Ohio, and was brought by his parents to McLean County, Illinois, in 1833; he died 21 October 1915 at Bloomington, Illinois. He was a man of unusual ability and energy, and was successful as a banker and real estate operator. He traveled much over this country and made inquiries, wherever he went about people named Bunn and their ancestry. It has been said that he compiled much data concerning the family, but no trace of it has been located. He was a member of the Christian Church, and a Democrat in politics. He married 4 May 1854 Mary Elizabeth Hutchinson of Christian County, Kentucky, born 30 January 1855, died 3 February 1898 in Bloomington, daughter of Joseph E. and Margaret (Gunnell) Hutchinson. They had five children; the writer has been unable, either by interviews or by correspondence, to get any information from Bunns now living at Bloomington.

Hugh Warner Bunn, fifth son of Isaac Kersey and Ruth Ann (Waldon) Bunn, was born 26 February 1863 in McLean County, Illinois, and received a high-school education. At the age of six years he learned from his father the art of budding and grafting fruit trees; he preserved seeds from the apples eaten by the family during the winter, which he planted in nursery rows in the family garden, and has been thus occupied to the present time; these trees that he planted in the garden, he budded and sold for five to ten cents apiece, and thus got his initial experience in the nursery business. At the age of 21 years he engaged extensively in farming, also carrying on nursery business in connection. In 1894 he had a nursery of 300,000 trees and plants. On 13 September 1913 he left Illinois and went to Kansas City, in order to educate his youngest daughters, and remained there four years. On 3 October 1917 he located in Polk County, Texas, for the purpose of growing nursery stock. Here he cleared the land of tall pines and hardwood timber. His present stock includes 223 varieties of trees and plants, and they often seem to him like living friends, in whose life and development he finds much entertainment and pleasure. Since 18 December 1887 he has been a member of the Christian Church; is a Republican, advocates enforcement of the law, and will not vote for a man who openly declares against the constitution and laws, while seeking an office whose duty is enforcement of the law. He has filled numerous school and town offices, but does not seek public office. He married 14 December 1884 at Blue Mound Church (now the village of Cooksville), Illinois, Nellie Lain born 1866, died 16 October 1906, a native of Monroe County, Kentucky, as were her parents. While on a visit to Cooper County, Missouri, the father was seized, put on a horse and taken to Texas, where he served in frontier guard of the Southern army four years. His wife, mother of Mrs. Bunn, Mary Ann Stephens, born and reared at Tipton, Cooper County, Missouri. Mr. Bunn married (2) 21 October 1909 at Kansas City Mrs. Mary Newcomb; no issue of this marriage. Children:

- i Elza Lloyd Bunn, born 20 August 1890, resides at Chenoa, Illinois
- ii Bernadine Bunn, born 27 August 1898, married Harold Vincent Evans, who was killed in an auto accident 3 April 1927; residence, Wichita, Kansas

456

William Bunn lived in Pennsylvania, according to his descendant, Mrs. Alie Euphemia Elder of Oakland, California. At some time in life he moved to Madison County, Illinois, where he possessed 160 acres of land within the limits of the village of New Douglas. His wife's maiden name was Elizabeth Rogers.

457

William Rogers Bunn, son of William and Elizabeth, was born 1 August 1835 in Pennsylvania, and accompanied or followed his parents to New Douglas, from Ohio; ultimately, he inherited the land of his father at that place, where he served as school treasurer, assessor and mayor. He was educated in the public schools, and began his independent efforts at the age of 13 years, by carrying mail, presumably from railroad station to post office; subsequently, he was school teacher and farmer; for a period of four years he served in the Quartermaster's department during the civil war. He married Martha Rebecca Valentine, who was killed in 1891 by a runaway team; she was a daughter of William B. and Sophia (Suggs) Valentine. The Valentine family was among the pioneers of Illinois, coming from Virginia in 1818. William B. Valentine had three wives and 23 children. He accumulated considerable property. There were numerous people of the name about New Douglas at one time. Children:

- vi Elma Arabella (Bunn) Clanton, now deceased
- 458 ii William Oliver Bunn, of further mention
- 459 iii Ulysses Warren Bunn, born 1865
- iv Elzada Jane (Bunn) Pitt, a teacher at Sorento, Bond County, Illinois
- v Alie Euphemia (Bunn) Elder, residing in Oakland, California
- vi Lettie Ann Bunn, now deceased
- vii Christopher Columbus Bunn, a meat dealer at Gillespie, Macoupin County, Illinois
- viii Elizabeth Bunn, deceased
- ix Myrtle Maud (Bunn) Meadows, wife of a railroad man, residing in Springfield, Illinois

458

William Oliver Bunn, eldest son of William Rogers Bunn, was born 10 September 1863, near Old Ripley, Bond County, Illinois, and was reared in the nearby town of New Douglas, Madison County, where he completed the eighth grade in the public school. He took up pharmacy under the instruction of Dr. S. C. Bucknell, a registered pharmacist of Illinois, meantime working in a drug store, and was soon registered as an assistant pharmacist of Illinois. At the age of 22 years he began teaching in public schools and continued in that occupation two years in Bond County and a like period in Montgomery County, adjoining. In 1889 he engaged in the drug business at New Douglas, where he continued until the spring of 1894, when he moved to Sailor Springs, Clay County, same State, and established a similar business, which he still continues; here, in 1905, he erected his home. In 1911 he participated in the organization of the Sailor Springs Banking Company, was its largest stockholder and its first cashier, and continued in that position until 1926, when he sold out his interest. He is a farm owner, and leading citizen. A Democrat in political principle, he is independent of party dictation; is a member of Clay City Lodge, No. 488, of the Eastern Star Chapter, Masonic order, of the Modern Woodmen of America and Order of Ben Hur. During the World War he was active in various drives for the promotion of the cause of liberty. A Methodist in religious faith, he is not a member of any Church. He married 20 September 1893 at Moser Hotel, St. Louis, Missouri, Laura Bertha Hayes of Troy, Madison County, Illinois. Children:

- i Rural Bunn, born 15 October 1894
- 460 ii Opal Leon Bunn, born 1896
- iii Martha Elizabeth Bunn, born 15 July 1898, is the wife of Jabez K. Coggan, a farmer residing at Sailor Springs
- iv Willard Erving Bunn, born 11 February 1901, is employed at Chicago State Hospital, Dunning, Illinois

459

Ulysses Warren Bunn, second son of William Rogers Bunn, was born 6 February 1865 at New Douglas, Illinois, and was educated in the common school there; at the age of 20 years he began teaching school and followed that vocation 27 years; he served for a time on a rural mail route; is now conducting a drug store at New Douglas; has served as clerk of school board, assessor and mayor, and has erected a home at New Douglas. He accepts the faith of the Methodist Church, and is a Democrat in politics. He married 26 September 1887 Hattie I. Livesey. Children:

- i Folsom Bunn, born 7 November 1888, is the wife of Fred Piatt, a teacher; has four children
- ii Mabel Bunn, born 12 August 1891, is the wife of John Schoenmetzler, a mechanic; no issue
- iii Ivan Bunn, born 6 June 1894, is a teacher at Marine, Madison County, Illinois; is married and has a son, Russell Bunn
- iv Bernice Bunn, born 27 October 1892, is the wife of George King, a mechanic; has three children

460

Opal Leon Bunn, senior son of William Oliver Bunn, was born 30 May 1896 at Sailor Springs, Illinois, and graduated from a high school at Flora, Clay County, Illinois, in 1917. At the age of 23 years he became a clerk in the office of the Sailor Springs Banking Company. In 1920 he entered the employ of the Illinois Merchants' Trust Company at Chicago, and has continued in that relation to the present time. In the meantime, he pursued a law course in the Chicago Kent College of Law, from which he graduated in 1927; in the following year he was admitted to the Bar of Illinois. He is a member of Clay City Lodge, No. 488 A. F. & A. M. of Clay City, Illinois, and Magnolia Chapter, O. E. S. of the same place; is a member of the Chicago Bar Association, Illinois Bar Association and American Institute of Banking; and of Sailor Springs Post, No. 230, American Legion. From July 12, 1917 to May 21, 1919 he was sergeant of the first class in the 96th Aero Squadron, in the 1st Day Bombardment Groups of the World's War, serving in France from 4 March 1918 to 1 May 1919, taking part in the battles of St. Mihiel, Meuse and Argonne. He married 17 October 1917 at Indianapolis, Indiana, Lucille Rinehart, daughter of Frederick and Catherine (Conley) Rinehart. Children:

- i Alberta Rose Bunn, born 25 October 1923
- ii William Frederick Bunn, born 23 July 1925

PENNSYLVANIA BUNNS

Here is a branch of the Bunn family that has been traced to Rahway, New Jersey, a town adjoining Woodbridge. There can be no doubt that it is descended from Matthew Bunn of that town. There is evidence that William Bunn of this family was a brother of Benjamin Bunn of Middlesex County, New Jersey, patriarch of a large number of Illinois Bunns (see No. 400).

460-A

William Bunn was born 1752 in Rahway, New Jersey, and was probably a grandson of William Bunn of that town (see No. 5) and, presumably, by strong evidence, a son of Reuben Bunn, who married Rachel Place of Woodbridge in 1744 (see No. 460-C). It is possible that he was a grandson of Miles Bunn of Woodbridge, who had son William. The persistence of the names Miles and Reuben removes any doubt about the connection with Woodbridge, to say nothing of location.

Family tradition states that William Bunn (460-A) was a soldier of the Revolution, with rank of corporal, but no record of such service has been found; the family tradition has been found to be lame in other respects; it states that William Bunn did not settle in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, until after 1828, while there is evidence that he located there soon after the Revolution and is believed to have been living in 1827. He married Ann Jacques, who must have been of French lineage. The following are known to have been their children, order of birth unknown:

Mary Bunn, married Henry Hubbell, lived in Hunterdon County

Nathan Bunn, lived at Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, later near Owensboro, Kentucky, and Mississippi; a son named William visited relatives in Pennsylvania; some descendants served in the Confederate army

- 460-B Miles Bunn, of further mention
Ann Bunn went to Kentucky, married Rev. ———
Arnold, and had a daughter
Moses Bunn, probably never married

460-B

Miles Bunn, son of William and Ann, was born 7 August 1779, at Rahway, and was reared in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, where he died in 1848. He married 18 August 1801 Margaret MacGirk, daughter of Stephen and Nancy (Noble) MacGirk. Four of their children are known, namely:

- i Isabel Bunn, never married
 - ii Sarah Ann Bunn, married Thomas Carlisle, lived at Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, and had a large family
 - iii Margaret Bunn, married ——— Byers and lived at Altoona, Pennsylvania; no issue
- 460-C iv James MacGirk Bunn, next mentioned

460-C

James MacGirk Bunn, was born in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, and was probably reared on a farm. He was educated at Chambersburg College and Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, graduating at the age of 21 years; at the age of 22 years, had medical, surgical and dental charge of the Franklin County almshouse; from 1850 to 1885 he practiced medicine and surgery in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania; from 1885 to 1893 he was an Eclectic specialist and bacteriologist at Altoona, Pennsylvania and from 1893 until his death, 15 December 1896, at Salem, Oregon. He was an expert in botany, gardening and mineralogy, and a thorough scientist. He purchased, built or rebuilt several homes. His intellect, proscribed of narrow sectarianism, he believed and lived a liberal Christianity. A Republican, he favored prohibition of liquor traffic. He affiliated with the Masonic and other fraternal orders, and was founder of one. He was the first president, continuing until death, of the National Bacteriological Society of New York. Dr. Bunn trained a company of men for the civil war, but was not accepted, himself, for service because of a weak heart; he declined the post of army surgeon rather than leave people within a radius of 30 miles without a physician.

He married 8 January 1852 at the Byers homestead in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, Ethelia Summerville (Weaver) Byers. Three of their sons, Abraham Lincoln, James and Reuben, died in infancy. The others are now deceased. Those who grew up:

- i Margaret Sarah Bunn, born 17 November 1852, married Louis J. Shaler, a professor of music and languages
- ii Athelia Belle Bunn, born 17 March 1855, married Matthew Savage, educator, editor and publisher
- iii Willatta May Bunn, born 7 December 1856, married William S. Mott, M. D.
- iv William Miles Bunn, born 13 October 1858, was medical student, railroad man, lecturer; a Mason
- v Ida Ruth Bunn, born 6 April 1860, married Clinton S. Browne M. D., and died 5 July 1897
- vi Elizabeth Jacques Bunn, born 13 March 1862, married 22 June 1928 Rev. George Edward Faber, an Episcopal clergyman of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a sweetheart of 40 years ago
- vii John Ellsworth Bunn, born 14 June 1863, died 7 June 1916

THE IOWA BUNNS

James Bunn, born 9 January 1815 at Berkhamstead, Staffordshire England, son of Francis Bunn, died 25 August 1882 on a farm in Douglas Township, Ida County, Iowa. He served an apprenticeship of seven years in learning the blacksmith's trade. He sailed from England 13 July 1850 and lived about five years near Cleveland, Ohio, where it is presumed he plied his trade. In 1855 he moved to Dubuque County, Iowa, settling in Worthington, where he probably continued to work at his trade. In 1871 he removed to Ida County, Iowa, where he purchased a quarter-section of railroad land, at $4.80 per acre. He did not attempt to become a farmer, but made this farm his headquarters, where he died. Two of his sons, who were carpenters, erected the buildings on the farm. James Bunn was a Methodist, and a Republican. He was admitted to citizenship at a United States District Court held at Dubuque 22 February 1861. He married 7 February 1834 at Leighton Buzzard, England, Mary Ann Seabrook, born 7 December 1813 at Slopton, England; she died 11 January 1902 at Washta, Cherokee County, Iowa, and was buried in Good Hope Cemetery, some six miles from Washta. Children:

- i Abraham Bunn, born 28 August 1835 in England
- ii Isaac Bunn, born 16 April 1839 in England, died at Denver, Colorado; had two sons and a daughter
- 461-A iii Jacob Bunn, born 1843 in England
- 462 iv Caleb Bunn, born 1845 in England
- v Sarah Bunn, born 30 November 1847 in England, is deceased; married ——— Vandever; children in far West
- 462-B vi John Bunn, born 2 January 1850 in England
- Twins born 1852, died unnamed
- ix James Alfred Bunn, deceased, widow and children living in the Dakotas and Montana

461-A

Jacob Bunn, third son of James and Mary A. (Seabrook) Bunn, was born 1 January 1843, in Berkhamstead, England and died 1924 on a farm in Iowa. At 19 years of age he began carpenter work and, later engaged in farming. He was a Methodist and Republican; was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, having served in the civil war as private in Company A, 44th Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry; married (3) 3 September 1871 at Cherokee Iowa Frances Anna Pearson, daughter of H. Pearson and Mary Jane Pindell, his wife. Children:

- i Mary Jane Bunn, born 3 January 1874, wife of Christopher Mundy, a farmer of Cherokee, Iowa
- ii Carrie May Bunn, born 10 January 1876, wife of John Edwin Kissinger, a farmer of Washta, Iowa
- iii Washington Andrew Bunn, born 22 August 1878, deceased
- 463 iv George Guy Bunn, born 1881
- v Birdie Florence Bunn, born 16 February 1883, wife of Charles Walters, a farmer at Pierson, Iowa

462

Caleb Bunn, born 18 March 1845 in England, died 15 November 1915 at Cherokee, Iowa. His education was supplied by country schools and farming was his lifework. He became the owner of a quarter-section of land in Cherokee County, Iowa, which he earned by his individual efforts, and retired some fifteen years before his death, taking up his residence in the village of Cherokee. He was a Methodist, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of the Knights of Pythias, a Republican in political principle. He was a volunteer soldier of the civil war, entering as private in Company L, First Iowa Calvary, from Dubuque County, Iowa; served about three years, and was mustered out in April 1866. He married about Christmas 1867 at Worthington, Dubuque County, Iowa, Josephine M. DeLong of that neighborhood; she died at the age of 76 years. Children:

i John William Bunn, born 9 October 1868, resides at Cherokee, Iowa

463-A ii Charles W. Bunn, born 1870

462-A

John Bunn, fifth son of James Bunn and Mary A. Seabrook, was born 2 January 1850 in Berkhamstead, Staffordshire, England, and came to this country while an infant, with his parents; was educated in country schools, and was a carpenter in early life, has been a farmer, insurance agent and merchant. He built the first house in Ida Grove, Iowa, and many rural school houses in Ida and Cherokee Counties, of that State; purchased 40 acres of land in Ida County, at $4.80 per acre, and engaged in farming for a time; moved from this farm to Washta, Cherokee County, in 1917; was at one time mayor of Washta, and carries a bullet in his neck, received while in discharge of his duty. He was County Supervisor of Ida County about six years and of Cherokee County nine years; was a hardware and machinery merchant, and long served as justice of the peace; has built two homes, and purchased his present residence in Cherokee. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F., since 1889; joined the order at Holstein, Iowa; transferred to Quimby, Iowa; is a charter member and first Noble Grand of Spruce Lodge, No. 284 of Washta, where he still retains membership; is a member of Cherokee Encampment, No. 147. In the great blizzard of January 1888, Mr. Bunn had a memorable experience, becoming lost on the way from his place of business at Washta to his home in Ida County; he was accompanied by a neighbor, riding in a sleigh which was followed by a dog; fortunately, they came in contact with a haystack, and men and dog found some protection under the hay; the warmth of the dog's body kept the men's feet from freezing and, by using their fists on each other they kept awake and thus escaped from fatal freezing. Mr. Bunn married 17 February 1874 near Worthington, Dubuque County, Iowa, Rebecca Parrott, daughter of Leven and Cornelia (Shawhan) Parrott now deceased. Children:

- i John Lawrence Bunn, born 3 March 1875, residing in Portland Orgeon; married 20 December 1896 Nellie Whitney; had five children
- 464 ii George Arthur Bunn, of Pierre, South Dakota
- iii Olive Daisy Bunn, born 10 March 1879, resides with her father at Cherokee
- 464-A iv Minnie Edith Bunn, born 1881, mentioned below
 - v Eva Almeda Bunn, born 22 July 1884, is the wife of James Roy Chase, a traveling salesman, residing at Sioux Falls, South Dakota
 - vi Elmer Seabrook Bunn, born 21 July 1886, died at the age of six months and was buried at Correctionville, Iowa
- 465 vii Radie Sylvester Bunn, born 1887
- viii Thurman Lee Bunn, born 12 January 1893, resides at Iroquois, South Dakota
- ix Howard G. Bunn, born 28 October 1896, was a student at the University of Iowa when he died, at the age of 21 years, and was buried at Cherokee, Iowa

463

George Guy Bunn, son of Jacob Bunn and Frances A. Pearson, was born 25 June 1881 at Cherokee, Iowa, resides at Los Angeles, California and is a Republican; it is assumed that he is unmarried, as he gives no further data.

463-A

Charles W. Bunn, son of Caleb Bunn, was born 20 February 1870 in Dubuque County, Iowa, and was educated in the country school and a business college. At 21 years of age he went to Fort Dodge, Iowa, and became an agent for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and has achieved success in business. His home in that city was erected by himself; he is a steward of the First Methodist Church of Fort Dodge, is a Republican and member of Ashler Lodge, No. 111, F. & A. M. He married 29 June 1892 at Quimby, Iowa, Edna Mae Hubbard, who died 6 August 1926 at Fort Dodge; she was daughter of Alanson R. Hubbard, who died in March 1906, and his wife, Clara M. Wilcox, who was born 10 May 1845, and is still well and hearty. Mr. and Mrs. Bunn were the parents of a daughter:

- i Elma Leota Bunn, born 22 April 1902, now the wife of Henry D. Africa, a printer of Fort Dodge

464

George Arthur Bunn, son of John Bunn, was born 18 August 1877 at Ida Grove, Ida County, Iowa, is a printer and foreman of the Capital-Journal printing office at Pierre, South Dakota. He was educated in the public schools, and began independent life at the age of 20 years, spending four years as a printer at Sioux City, Iowa; has occupied his present position 20 years. He has given much attention to the preservation of the genealogy of his family, and has furnished the writer with printed matter of value. He is a member of the Modern Brotherhood of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, attends the Methodist Church and is a Republican. He married 30 October 1897 at Sioux City, Iowa, Susan Clark, born 4 June 1872 (died 9 July 1921 at Pierre), daughter of John and Susan (Vierth) Clark of Washta, Iowa, the former now deceased. Children:

 - iii John Waverly Bunn, born 2 May 1919, died 2 May 1919

465-A

John Bunn, born about 1715, lived in Tewksbury, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, where he first appeared of record in April 1757. He died about 17 October 1775. Investigation has shown that he lived among, and did business with, English-speaking people, and there can be little doubt that he was among the large number of the descendants of Matthew Bunn (who came from Boston and settled at Woodbridge, New Jersey, in 1670) that settled in West Jersey. That his wife was of German family is indicated by two facts; first, her name was Anna, the approved German form of the name; the English form has always been Ann or Anne, the latter form being most ancient (when an "e" was added to almost every word that could receive it—for what reason can only be conjectured; perhaps for emphasis or as evidence of respect, just as many names were begun with a small letter doubled, to give the distinction otherwise shown by use of a capital). The second reason for supposing John Bunn's wife to be of German lineage is the fact that her son received the name "Coonrod," or Conrad, one of the most usual baptismal names among Germans; this seems to be the only instance where a Bunn is found with a German or Dutch name. Chambers' "Early Germans of New Jersey" includes John Bunn as of German birth, but all our investigations have failed to discover any ground for this, beyond the fact that his son had a German name. This is the only child of John and Anna Bunn of whom any record has been discovered. No doubt, Anna Bunn related many tales to her children having to do with Germany and German ideas and customs; there are other cases in which Bunns married Dutch women or those of Dutch descent among their neighbors in the Mohawk Valley and elsewhere, where "Old wives' tales" were handed down, giving rise to the tradition that the Bunns were Dutch.

Conrad Bunn, born 1738, died 17 December 1822; married Mary Walden, born 1738, died 8 February 1826. As no location of their offspring is given, except in rare instances, and no occupation, it is scarcely worth while to follow up those mentioned in matter at disposal of the editor at any length. They appear to have lived in German Valley. A collection of names and dates, only, may constitute pure genealogy, but it contains little to hold the interest of the reader. Conrad and Mary had children:

- i John Bunn
- ii Mary Catherine Bunn, born 10 January 1762, married 9 January 1785 Jacob Miller, born 9 February 1759, died 12 May 1821
- iii Martin Bunn, born 24 March 1765, died 24 March 1853; married Esther Crater, born 1767, died 25 December 1854; had Conrad, Morris, Elizabeth, William, Mary, Margaretta and Catherine Bunn

- iv David Bunn, probably married Mehitable Cooper
- v Jacob Bunn, born 1766, married Elizabeth Cooper, born 1785, daughter of Samuel Cooper; had: Samuel, Martin, Nathan, Abraham, George Washington, Emeline and Mary C. Bunn
- vi George Bunn, born 1767, married Elizabeth Reinart
- vii Gertrude Charity Bunn, born 1769, married 9 April 1784 John Kern, born 1763
- viii Frederick Bunn, born 4 April 1775 in "German Valley" in neighborhood of the present village of New Germantown, Town of Tewksbury, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, died 13 February 1842; married 22 December 1793 Margaret Schneider, born 15 March 1777, daughter of Joseph Schneider, died 25 January 1835; had children: Catherine, Isaiah, Elizabeth, John F, Frederick, Sarah, Joseph, David, William, Jacob and Alfred Bunn
- ix Margaret Bunn

THE NORTH CAROLINA FAMILY

470

In 1621 or 1622, Dr. Thomas Bunn, Physician and "Chorurgaine" (Surgeon) appears to have been an immigrant, settling at James City, or Jamestown, Virginia. He is mentioned several times in the "Virginia Magazine of History," in court records at this place. It appears that he had a suite of rooms, and several servants, and was a man of character and standing in the settlement.

We give a few extracts below from the records concerning him:

"At Courte held March 7, 1624, it ordered in Courte y't Charles Harmer (1) shall give sufficient securitie to Mr. Thomas Bunn as he shall accept of for pay to Mr. Bunn One hundred pound waight for the best merchantible Tobacco in leafe, etc."

Va. Mag. Vol. 22, pp. 138-139:

"Thomas Marlott, Gent, sworne and examined, sayeth y't upon Friday, the 11th of March, 1624, he bein in company with Mr. Thomas Bunn at Capt. Mathew's house where Mr. John Roe vldt.) Mr. Roe, you are very weak and sick, and I would advise you to settle your estate, as well for the disposing of your own estate as for ye estate of Mr. Henry Wentworth which is now in your possession, to which Mr. Roe answered (he being then in perfect memory), my desire is that you will take both of my owne estate and Mr. Wentworth's into your hands, and you would sende Mr. Wentworth's goodes into England unto him if Mr. Wentworth came not over himself or sent sufficient order for the receiving of them here. And for my own estate I freely leave that to yourself. Then Mr. Bunn told him, saying: 'Mr. Roe, maybe that you have some friends in England to whom you will bestow some part of your goods and you may do well to consider well of that.' To whom Mr. Roe said he would desire Mr. Bunn to make choyce of Two Hundred pound weight of his best tobacco and send it to Mr. Wentworth into England, to be sent by Mr. Wentworth to his Mother into Yorkshire for a token to her, and all that remayned of his estate he gave to Mr. Bunn, save a small quantity of tobacco which he would give in the house to those that tended him, which he did hope Mr. Bunn would not be against, Mr. Bunn replied God forbid I shoud."

"Mr. Bunn, Chorurgaine, sworne and examined, sayeth, John Skinner, a 16 year old servant and an M. Proctor's boy Will whip a Negro slave, and he was called to see a sore which the 'Wench hath on her foote'. He also states that he was called often to attend the servants of Mr. Proctor."

From Va. Mag. 29 - See Index:

"Mr. Thomas Bunn was sworn Apr. 25, 1626, deposes that the bill he produced in court for physick and surgerie for Andrew Waters, Mr. Richard Stevens man, is a 'trewbill' and due debt unto him. 'Yt' is ordered yt John Southern shall pay the said bill to Mr. Bunn out of Mr. Stephens goodes.

"On March 27, 1626, Thomas Bunn give medical service to Mr. William Atkin, who was very weak at his house."

"Thomas Ironmonger arrested at the suite of Bridget Bunn for 215 1 of Tobacco ought to appeare Feb. 12th, 1627."—From Vol. 29, Page 45, Mag. Bridget Bunn was the wife of Dr. Thomas Bunn.

Va. Mag. Vol. XXVI, p. 4:

"James City Courte held Aug. 13, 1626.

"Whereas John Smith (3) hath wrongfully accused Mr. Woolridge, Mr. Bunn, and others, Yt it ordered that he shall ask their forgiveness here in Courte for their satisfaction, and that after his time is expired with Francis Fowler then to give the said Francis Fowler satisfaction for his own days worke and his man and for ye loss of ye said John Smith his owne days worke and after worke to serve ye publique for 3 months at the disposinge of the Govenor and Council."

471

It is assumed that Thomas Bunn, only known son of Dr. Thomas Bunn, and Bridget, his w'fe, was next in the line of succession.

472

The next in line is John Bunn, born about 1650-60, who probably lived some time not far from Jamestown, in Nansemond County, Virginia, whence it is a short trip to Bertie County, North Carolina, where his will was probated 20 January 1727. It is evident that there were other descendants of Thomas Bunn in Nansemond County; Joel Ricks married about 1765 in Nansemond County Mary Bunn; John Bunn's will, probated in Bertie County shows wife Eleanor and the following children:

- i John Bunn, jr., eldest son; was willed 300 acres of land by his father; in 1743 took up 400 acres in Bertie County
- 473 ii David Bunn, was willed plantation lying in Virginia
- iii Benjamin Bunn, was willed plantation "where I now live."
- iv Ann Bunn, mentioned in will; no further record

473

David Bunn, second son of John and Eleanor Bunn, born, probably, about 1700, received a plantation "lying in Vergenia" by will of his father, which was, apparently, in Nansemond County, Virginia. About 1752 he moved thence to North Carolina, and died about 1783. His wife bore the baptismal name of Mary. Children:

- 474 i Benjamin Bunn, born 1740
- ii Redmond Bunn, left no issue
- 475 iii David Bunn, mentioned below
- iv Elizabeth Bunn, married Joseph Curl
- v Sallie Bunn, married William Curl
- vi Annie Bunn, married Louis Curl
- vii Leeter Bunn, married ——— Burrows; no issue; married (2) Amos Gandy, and had: Foster and Sallie Gandy

474

Benjamin Bunn, eldest child of David and Mary Bunn, was born 1740 and died 1813; he was a member of the Halifax Brigade No. 3, of Edgecombe County, North Carolina, under Captain James Gray, and was afterwards commissioned Captain at Wilmington, North Carolina, 11 June 1776, in the Revolutionary service. He married a Miss (Elinor?) Burwell, probably a daughter of Major Burwell who loaned money to the colony. Children:

- 476 i Benjamin Bunn, born 1765
- 477 ii Burwell Bunn, died about 1803
- iii Joel Bunn, settled in Yancy County, North Carolina; said to have descendants at Dyersburg, Tenn.
- 478 iv William Bunn, of further mention
- 479 v Mary Bunn, married Elisha Battle, son of Elisha Battle (see No. 477)

475

David Bunn, third son of David and Mary Bunn; there seems to be no record, but he is known to have been the father of:

- 480 David Bunn

476

Benjamin Bunn, eldest child of Benjamin Bunn and his wife, born 1765, died 3 December 1819; married Kate Massey, born 6 August 1767, died 8 June 1825, lived in Wake County, North Carolina. Children:

- 480-A i Budd Bunn, born 5 March 1784
- ii Nancy Bunn, born 5 October 1787
- iii Cade Bunn, sr., born 15 September 1789, died 10 June 1830, in Wake County near Raleigh; married Ruth Strickland
- iv Sallie Bunn, born 16 October 1792
- 481 v James Bunn, sr., born 1795
- 481-A vi Bennett Bunn, born 1 September 1798
- vii Clara Bunn, born 10 January 1802
- viii Henry Bunn, born 14 February 1805, died 6 November 1841

477

Burwell Bunn, second son of Benjamin, sr., Bunn, born about 1767, died about 1803; he married Charity Horn, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Battle) Horn. Sarah Battle was the daughter of Elisha, sr., and Elizabeth (Seamore) Battle. Elisha Battle was very active in public life in the colony of North Carolina, was senator from Edgecombe County during the Revolution and afterward until 1787, with the exception of two years. He was a delegate to the constitutional convention of 1788, and chairman of the Committee of the Whole; was active in securing a postponing of the adoption of the National constitution until numerous amendments were adopted; because of ill health, he was not a delegate to the convention of 1790, which adopted the National Constitution after objections of the previous convention were satisfied. Elisha Battle was born 9 January 1723, a son of William Battle, who lived in Nansemond County, Virginia, a son of John Battle, an early resident of that colony, on Pasquotank river. Elisha Battle settled on Tar river, five miles from Rocky Mount, North Carolina, where he purchased land of Earl Granville, now in possession of his descendants. He was intelligent, industrious and thrifty, and added much to his original holdings; for 28 years from 1764, he was a deacon of the Baptist Church at the Falls of Tar river; he served in many public capacities, as justice of the peace, as chairman of the Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions, as commissioner of the town of Tarboro; for 20 years he represented Edgecombe in the General Assembly, and was a delegate to the Congress of April 1776 and supported the resolution to declare independence. In later generations we find descendants of Elisha Battle united by marriage with Bunn descendants. Burwell and Charity Bunn had children:

- i William Bunn, married Miss Baker and had children: Jolly, Joel, Mary and Margaret Bunn
- 482 ii Henry Bunn, married Nancy Thorpe
- 483 iii Jeremiah Bunn, of further mention
- iv Piety Bunn

478

William Bunn, fourth son of Benjamin Bunn, sr., and Miss Burwell, married Drucilla Whitfield, born December 1784, died 11 October 1878, daughter of Benjamin and Delilah (Griffin) Whitfield. William Bunn died in early manhood, when his wife was but 22 years of age. They had two children, namely:

- i Benjamin Bunn, died in childhood
- 484 ii Redmond Bunn, born 1806

479

Mary Bunn, youngest child of Benjamin Bunn, sr., married Elisha Battle, jr., born about 1745, son of Elisha, sr., and Elizabeth (Seamore) Battle (see No. 477).

480

David E. Bunn, son of David Bunn, was born 1772, died 19 May 1829; he married Mary Horn, who died 10 February 1832. Two children are of record, namely:

- 485 i Alford Bunn, born 1792
- 486 ii David Bunn, born 1809

480-A

Budd Bunn, eldest child of Benjamin Bunn and Kate Massey, was born 5 March 1784, probably in Wake County, North Carolina, or in that vicinity, and was a farmer in Wake County; he died about the close of the civil war. No record of marriage or children is available; he was the father of Applewhite Bunn, who was a farmer at Earpsboro, North Carolina, and died about 1916; married Mary Pierce, and they were parents of:

- 486-A Taylor Bunn, born 1855

James Bunn, sr., third son of Benjamin Bunn, jr., and Kate Massey, was born 24 May 1795 in Wake County, North Carolina, and operated a plantation of several thousand acres, lying in Wake and Nash Counties of that State, and kept many slaves; his residence was near Wakefield postoffice, now Zebulon, North Carolina. He married in Johnson County, North Carolina, Obedience O'Neil, who was born near Smithfield in that County, died 1876 at Zebulon. Children:

- i Rowena Bunn, married (1) Chamblee, (2) Berry Horton; has son living near Zebulon, who does not answer letter
- ii Martha Bunn, unmarried
- iii Sydney Bunn, married Amanda Beale and settled on a farm near his father
- iv Benjamin Bunn, had wife Susan, and sons, James and William, said to be living at Hamburg, Arkansas; do not answer letters, which never came back unclaimed
- v Serena Bunn, married Jesse Beale; descendant at Red Oak, North Carolina, refuses to answer inquiry
- vi Armenia Bunn, married Joseph Glover; children refuse to answer queries about parents
- vii William Bunn, married (1) Jane Hinton, (2) Caroline Dodd, settled on a farm near his father; children failed to furnish information
- viii Piety Bunn, unmarried
- 487 ix James Bunn, born 1832
- x Narcissa Bunn, married Wesley Privett; letter addressed to son at Dorchester, Texas, was not returned
- 488 xi Cade D. Bunn, married Betty Young
- xii Damaris Bunn, married William B. Bergeron; son at Middlesex, North Carolina, fails to give information

481-A

Bennett Bunn, fourth son of Benjamin and Kate (Massey) Bunn, was born 1 September 1798 at Raleigh, Wake County, North Carolina, where he was a planter, and died there in 1853. He married Nancy Hinton O'Neil, sister of the wife of his elder brother, James Bunn; she was born 1804 and died in June 1886 at Raleigh; the name of her father is unknown; her mother was Eleanor (Rina) Hinton, believed to be a descendant of Colonel John Hinton, jr., whose wife was Grizel Kimbrough. Children:

- i Hinton Bunn, born 21 April 1825, was killed in the civil war, 1863
- ii Emeline Bunn, born 15 August 1827, married Payton Finch of Bailey, Nash County, North Carolina; both are now deceased; could find no trace of their children
- iii Penina Bunn, born 4 September 1829, married 19 December 1852 Sherwood Brantley; children about Zebulon
- 512 iv Ashley Bunn, died in civil war
- 513 v Allison Troy Bunn, born 1834
- vi Huel Bunn, born 14 September 1835, killed in civil war, 1861
- vii Nancy Ann Bunn, born 23 January 1838, died 9 March 1898; she inherited her father's house near Raleigh; married 10 November 1872 Edward Kemp; Mrs. Edgar R. Bunn of Zebulon, North Carolina, is a daughter; persistent letter-writing failed to secure any account of either family

482

Henry Bunn, second son of Burwell and Charity (Horn) Bunn, was born 18 December 1795, at Rocky Mount, Nash County, North Carolina, (the city of Rocky Mount is built on the plantation where born) and died about 1877 at Tarversville, Twiggs County, Georgia. About 1817 he moved to Cedartown, Polk County, Georgia, where he was a planter and slave holder. He married 16 September 1814 near Rocky Mount, North Carolina Nancy Thorpe, who was born 21 October 1797 at Nashville, Nash County, North Carolina, daughter of Henry and Priscilla (Harris) Thorp. Children.

- 489 i Marcus Henry Bunn, born about 1818-19
- ii Hugh Lawson Bunn, was a teacher and farmer; died many years since at Fort Gaines, Georgia; had three daughters, Laura, Nancy and Sarah; the last named is now living in Cedartown, Georgia;

the second married Adiel Adams, a successful wholesale merchant of Macon, Georgia, now deceased

- iii William Bunn
- iv Thaddeus Bunn
- v Henry Bunn, jr.
- vi Judson Bunn
- 490 vii Sarah Bunn, married Fred Tarver and A. H. Colquitt
- viii Portia Bunn
- ix Harriet Bunn, married Gen. Henry Tarver and had sons, William and Benjamin T. Tarver; latter is now living at Chattanooga, Tennessee
- x Martha Bunn

483

Jeremiah Bunn, third son of Burwell and Charity (Horn) Bunn, was a cotton planter at Haynesville, Houston County, Georgia; he was probably born before 1800, and now must have been long deceased. We have no record of his marriage or children, except two, in fact, one of these is of record, while the other is remembered by a grand-nephew; they are:

- 491 i John Burwell Bunn, born 1817
- ii Marshall Bunn

Redmond Bunn, second son of William and Drucilla (Whitfield) Bunn, born 5 April 1806, lived in Nash County, North Carolina; died 14 August 1883; married 20 March 1832 Mary Hickman Bryan, born 9 February 1814, died 12 August 1866, daughter of Elias and Rosanna Holmes (Everett) Bryan. Two sons died in infancy; we find record of five survivors, namely:

- i William Henry Bunn, born 6 January 1833, was captain of Company H, 4th North Caroline regiment in the Confederate service in the war of 1861 and was killed in battle at Burgess' Mill, near Petersburg, Virginia, 27 October 1864
- ii Elizabeth Drucilla Bunn, born 4 July 1834, died 19 June 1852

- 492 iii Mary Redmond Bunn, born 1839 iv Elias Bunn, born 11 October 1841, was adjutant of the 12th North Carolina regiment in Confederate service in the war of 1861, and died from wounds received at the battle of Hanover Court House, Virginia
 493 v Benjamin Hickman Bunn, born 1844

485

Alford Bunn, elder son of David and Mary (Horn) Bunn, was born 25 February 1792 and died 11 February 1832. He married Kittie Hines, and they were the parents of David Louis Bunn, who was born 4 November 1821 and died 1863; he was a soldier of the Confederate army; married Harriet Amanda Barnes, born 3 September 1820, died 10 March 1868. Children:

- i James D. Bunn, born 21 June 1843, died May 1906
 ii Joseph Henry Bunn, born 31 October 1845; married 18 December 1866 Tillie Fisher, born 21 October 1845 iii William J. B. Bunn, born 22 June 1848
 iv Bennett Lewis Bunn, born 3 March 1855, married 20 December 1874 Lucille H. Wieder born 28 May 1857 died 6 April 1899

486

David Bunn, second son of David and Mary (Horn) Bunn, was born 2 July 1809 in Nash County, North Carolina, near Rocky Mount, and was a planter and slave owner in that section and Johnson County until 1844; in that year he moved to Fayette County, Tennessee, and, two years later, to Ouachita County, Arkansas, where he continued to reside until his death, 21 January 1858. He married 30 June 1831 Elizabeth Thomas, born 14 April 1813 in Edgecombe County, North Carolina, died 10 October 1863, daughter of Jacob and Mary Thomas. Children.

- 494 i Mary Louise Bunn, born 1833
 495 ii Wiley Jolly Bunn, born 1835
 496 iii Henry Gaston Bunn, born 1838

486-A

Taylor Bunn, son of Applewhite and Mary (Pierce) Bunn, grandson of Budd Bunn, was born 25 September 1855 at Earpsboro, Johnson County, North Carolina, near Zebulon, and was educated in the common school of the neighborhood. At the age of 21 years he went to Camden, South Carolina, where, from 1877 to 1884 he dealt in turpentine; in the later year moved to Florida and continued in the same business two years; since 1886 he has operated a saw mill, dealt in turpentine and engaged in farming and merchandising in Ware County, Georgia; at present in turpentine business and farming at Fairfax, Ware County, where he owns 11,000 acres of land; four hundred acres of this is under cultivation, devoted chiefly to corn and tobacco. His home in Fairfax was erected by himself. He is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church of Fairfax, and of Masonic Lodge, No. 305 at Waycross, Georgia; in politics, a Democrat, but not an office seeker. He married 27 February 1881 in Johnston County, North Carolina, Elizabeth Whitley, a daughter of Monroe and Martha Whitley. Children:

- i Marvin L. Bunn, now deceased
 - ii James Dudley Bunn, born 10 September 1884, resides at Fairfax
 - iii Nannie Estelle Bunn, born 17 July 1886, married Ben S. Gibson, manager for New York Life Insurance Company, residing at Waycross, Ware County, Georgia
 - iv Harvey Carswell Bunn, born 16 October 1888, lives at Waycross
- 519 v Lila Pearl Bunn, born 1891

James Bunn, jr., fourth son of James Bunn, sr., and his wife, Obedience O'Neil, was born 20 November 1832 at Zebulon, Wake County, North Carolina, where he was a large farmer; he was among the liberal supporters of the Missionary Baptist Church, a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Democrat, but not an active politician. While he might not be described as wealthy, he lived well, and his home was a most hospitable one, the happy resort of clergymen. He married 4 November 1858 at Spring Hope, Nash County, North Carolina, Sarah Ann Westray (lovingly known as Sallie) born 24 February 1840 at Spring Hope, died 15 January 1911 at Zebulon, daughter of Samuel Page Westray and Rebecca Dozier, his wife, of Edgecombe County North Carolina. Children:

- 497 i Henrietta Octavia Bunn, born 1860
- 498 ii George Westray Bunn, born 1867
- 498-A iii James Pettigrew Bunn, born 2 February 1869
 - iv Edgar Roger Bunn, born 19 December 1871, married Minda Kemp; resides near Zebulon
- 498-B v Martha Lelia Bun, born 11 June 1873
- 499 vi Viola Blanche Bunn, born 1875
- 500 vii Ernest Vance Bunn, born 1877
- 501 viii Mary Westray Bunn, born 1879
 - ix Ida Lee Bunn, born 15 July 1881, married J. A. Braswell; lives near Zebulon, North Carolina

488

Cade D. Bunn, fifth son of James Bunn, sr., and his wife, Obedience O'Neil, was born 11 February 1843 at Zebulon, North Carolina, and was a large farmer, two miles east of Wakefield, now Zebulon; he inherited a large tract from his father, to which he added by purchase after the civil war. Soon after the outbreak of this struggle he enlisted 14 October 1861 in Company H, 31st Regiment, North Carolina State Troops, and was advanced to the rank of corporal; he was in the thick of the fighting, was severely wounded in the neck and shoulder but, after recovery, rejoined his company and was with it at the close of the war. Soon after the close of hostilities, he settled down to farming, his home being on the famous Raleigh and Tarboro road; he was at all times greatly interested in politics, schools and the religious life of the community, earning the regard and esteem of those who knew him. Mr. Bunn was a deacon of the White Stone Baptist Church for fifty years; this Church was moved to Zebulon, and is now known as the Zebulon Baptist Church; for 52 years he was an officer of the Masonic Lodge of Wakefield; this is believed to be the record for continuous official service in the jurisdiction of North Carolina. Cade D. Bunn married 23 December 1869 Bettie Amanda Young, a school teacher, whose home was at Arpsboro, Johnston County, North Carolina, born 23 November 1843, daughter of Benjamin and Martha H. Young, died 20 September 1911. Mr. Bunn died 18 May 1921. Children:

- i Benjamin Cade Bunn, born 26 September 1872, resides near Zebulon
- 502 ii Cornelius Marvin Bunn and
- iii Edwin Harris Bunn, twins, born 12 December 1874; Edwin Harris, resides near Zebulon
- iv Martha Amanda Bunn, born 10 July 1877
- 503 v Falc Elmo Bunn, born 1880
- 504 vi Julian Wilbur Bunn, born 1883
- vii Mary Demaris Bunn, born 30 June 1885
- viii Beauregard Holmes Bunn, born 15 May 1899

489

Marcus Henry Bunn, son of Henry and Nancy (Thorpe) Bunn, was born about 1818-19 at Tarversville, Twiggs County, Georgia, and lived at Cedar-town, Polk County, same State, where he died 9 May 1885. He was a farmer and slave owner before the civil war. He married 1 December 1842 Catherine Carden, daughter of Charles and Susan (Roach) Carden, the latter a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Gatlin) Roach, who lived near Henderson, North Carolina; the Carden family is supposed to have come from Tipperary, Ireland to North Carolina many years ago; present prominent members of the Carden family of Tipperary are: Sir Lionel Carden, English ambassador to Mexico, and Admiral Carden, who was in command of the British fleet at Constantinople in 1917. Marcus H. and Catherine Bunn had children:

- i Henry Bunn, born 6 June 1844, was killed at the age of 17 years in the civil war
- ii Portia Maria Bunn, born 12 January 1847, was a distinguished teacher; died 1918, unmarried
- iii Adela Bunn, born 7 January 1849, became the wife of Joseph H. Dodds, a successful hardware merchant, who died in 1918; she died in 1919, leaving a daughter, Myrta, living unmarried at Cedartown, Georgia
- iv Dorothy T. Bunn, born 18 November 1853, died 1898; married 7 October 1874 William T. Griffeth and had children: Ladye, William and Marcus; the sons died unmarried; the daughter married Charles Bailey
- v Marcus Aurelius Bunn, born 18 January 1856, died in infancy

Benjamin Hickman Bunn, son of Redmond and May Hickman (Bryan) Bunn, born 19 October 1844,

in Nash County, North Carolina, was a useful and honored public servant. At the age of 17 years he enlisted in the Confederate service and, for conspicuous gallantry, was made first lieutenant. He had just completed his preparation for college when the war came on; he became a member of Company I, 30th North Carolina Infantry, and served throughout the war; when peace came he began the study of law under his uncle, William T. Dortch and Judge George V. Story at Goldsboro, and received his county court license in June 1866, and his superior court license a year later. Locating permanently at Rocky Mount, he quickly took high rank and had reputation as one of the strongest men at the Carolina Bar. At his death, 25 August 1907, his practice was rated as the largest and most lucrative in the State; almost every man in the county was personally known to him and gave him confidence; with eloquent voice, commanding personality and thorough grounding in the law, he was an ideal attorney and political leader, and he was the undisputed leader of the Democracy in his vicinage. He was an active supporter of the national ticket in 1868 and a member of the constitutional convention which established the present constitution of the State in 1875; as a member of the legislature in 1882, he was chairman of the joint committee on the code; in 1884 he was an elector for the fourth district and was chosen messenger to convey the vote of North Carolina to the United States Senate; in 1880 he was delegate to the national convention which nominated General Hancock for the presidency; in 1884 as candidate for nomination to Congress, he led the convention in 212 ballots, losing on the 213th; in 1890 he received the unanimous nomination and was elected by a handsome majority; for the second term he received a majority of 6,500 votes, and was elected to and served a third term with honor and credit; he then retired to give undivided attention to his large legal business. He married 7 November 1871 Harriet A. Phillips, a lady of culture and refined nature, daughter of Dr. James J. Phillips, long a leading physician of the State. Children, all the living residing in Rocky Mount:

Henry Gaston Bunn, youngest child of David and Elizabeth (Thomas) Bunn, was born 12 June 1838 near Rocky Mount, Nash ounty, North Carolina, and died 17 July 1908 at El Dorado, Arkansas. He was six years old when his parents moved to Fayette County, Tennessee, and two years older when they settled in Ouachita County, Arkansas, where his home continued to be until he went on the supreme bench of that State. In February 1859 he entered Davidson College, North Carolina, and remained until May 1861, when he returned home and became a member of the Fourth Arkansas Infantry, Confederate army, under General Ben McCullough, in southeast Missouri, soon after the battle of Oak Hills; from November of that year to April 1862 he was adjutant of his regiment, then promoted for gallant service to colonel; served under Generals Beauregard, Bragg, Kirby Smith Joseph E. Johnston, while they commanded in the West, and was with Johnston in his last battle, at Bentonville, North Carolina, 1 and 2 March 1865, and at the surrender near Greensboro; subsequently he was in command of the brigade until it was abandoned in south Arkansas about 10 June 1865. He was admitted to the bar in Arkansas in 1866, was elected to the state senate in 1873 and was a delegate from Ouachita County to the state constitutional convention of 1874; in May 1893 he was appointed chief justice to fill a vacancy and, in 1896, he was elected to fill the full term of eight years; at the end of that period he established himself at El Dorado, and built up a most successful practice. He was above all a fearless and honest judge; in no sense a politician, he would spurn an advantage gained at the cost of his self-respect and would stoop to no tactics beneath the acts of a Christian gentleman. At first a member of the Methodist Church, later he united with the Presbyterian Church and became deacon in 1870; in 1887 was promoted to elder at Camden; served the Church at Little Rock in the same capacity and also at El Dorado. He married (1) 6 September 1865 Louise E. H. Holmes, who died 5 July 1866; married (2) 1870 Arralee Connolly. Children:

Paul Vernon Bunn was born 10 July, 1871, near Zebulon, (or "Wakefield") Wake County, N. C., son of Allison Troy Bunn and Penelope Elizabeth (farmer) Bunn. Allison T. Bunn fought in the Confederate Army in the Civil War, and his greatgrandfather, William Bunn, was a captain in the Revolutionary War.

Paul Vernon Bunn was educated in the grade, high and private schools in Wilson, N. C., was for three years (1885-7) at Wake Forest College, N. C., and attended George Washington University, Washington, D. C. His career has been a most versatile one, covering a wide field of endeavor and experience. He began his business life as printer's devil on the Advance, of Wilson, N. C., published by Josephus Daniels, afterward Secretary of the Navy under President Wilson; also serving in several other capacities on the newspaper. In 1888 he was a clerk in the store of Hadley & Briggs, Wilson, N. C., and in 1889 was clerk in the auditor's office of the Atlantic Coast Line at Wilmington, N. C. In that year he was appointed through the Civil Service examination as clerk in the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., under Theodore Roosevelt, Civil Service Commissioner, and served there in various positions for seven years, during which time his relations with Roosevelt were of a confidential nature. It was in this department that he first exhibited his talents as an organizer and efficiency expert. He was promoted to the position of chief of the division which supervised examinations, and investigated violations of the law. After Roosevelt left the Commission, he resigned his position in 1898, to become Agency Director for the New York Life Insurance Company, receiving at that time a certificate which declared that he had "so organized his department as to result in a three-fold increase in efficiency, with no increase in expense."

He was engaged for four years in organizing field-agencies for the New York Life, and was then appointed cashier for ten states and Western Canada, with headquarters in Chicago. In this office he collected $12,000,000 a year.

Subsequent to the insurance panic, which caused insurance companies to discontinue numerous agencies, he became in 1906 General Office Manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co., in Chicago. He carefully studied the mail order business while in charge of twelve departments, with 2,000 employes under his direction. Then, wishing to become intimately acquainted with big retail business, he took charge in 1909 of the catalogues and all magazine advertising of John Wanamaker in New York City.

Mr. Bunn's next experience was dramatic, in a way. Leaders in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States picked him for supervisor of membership and organization—an extraordinary work, as its object was to build up the national chamber. He was interested and expressed a willingness to accept the offer but, not wishing to make a leap in the dark, he resolved to confer with the men who would probably run the association during the ensuing year. He was told that Wallace D. Simmons, president of the Simmons Hardware Company, was slated for next president, so he interviewed Mr. Simmons, who informed him that E. C. Simmons, founder of the Simmons Company, was one of the best organizers in the country. The latter met Mr. Bunn and found in him a kindred soul, with the result that Mr. Bunn did not accept the position with the Chamber of Commerce, but went instead to St. Louis, and on January 1, 1914, entered the Simmons concern as organization and efficiency expert. During three years he investigated the departments, activities, business and methods of the Simmons Company, and submitted various recommendations for strengthening and extending the business.

When the secretary and general manager of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce resigned, President Davis looked toward Bunn as the man best equipped for the place, but felt it his duty to appoint a committee to help him find a suitable manager. He went to Washington, New York and Chicago for information about possible candidates. The report of this special committee declared that no one else but Bunn would do. President Davis then told the Chamber that he had personally investigated Bunn's qualifications and that no one else would do. "Bunn was not an applicant for the position," said President Davis. "In fact, he demurred when I asked him if he would take it, and offered to help me find a suitable man. But that was the one job on which he fell down. I told him he just had to get in the breach and help us, and then he agreed to accept it."

Mr. Bunn served in this position, the most important semipublic office in St. Louis, from 1917 to 1926, declaring at the outset that his function was to run the chamber—to effectuate the policies defined by the administration, not to formulate policies himself. He is described in the St. Louis Republic at that time as a big man physically, tall and massive, but with a slight stoop which lessened somewhat the effect of height. Other characteristics are a high forehead, a large, round head, a prominent nose and large chin, and big, searching blue eyes. He left the impression that he was a man of broad and true vision, sure decision, prompt action and firm resolve.

In the fall of 1927 Mr. Bunn was elected assistant to the President of the Remington Arms Company and, a month later, Vice President and General Manager of the Remington Cash Register Company of Ilion, New York, the position which he occupied at the time of this publication. In religious faith he is a Presbyterian; in politics a Republican. He is a member of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and of the Empire State Society, Sons of the American Revolution; his application to the latter organization was signed by Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Bunn married 12 June 1894 Bertie Sprague Bailey, daughter of Major Milo V. Bailey and Emma (Sprague) Bailey of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Bunn's ancestor was a "minute man" of the Revolution, and she is associated with the Daughters of the Revolution. Her sister (Irene) "Temple Baily," is a well known writer of fiction. Children of Paul V. and Bertie S. Lunn:

517 i Elizabeth Sprague Bunn, born 12 September 1895

518 ii Milo Baily Bunn, born 1897

Alexander Moss Bunn, junior son of Allison Troy and Penelope E. (Farmer) Bunn, was born 13 July 1877 at Wilson, Wilson County, North Carolina, and attended the graded school at that place and a high school and law school in Washington, D. C. His first independent effort was made in the Government service, in the U. S. Patent Office. He began his law practice as patent attorney with Poole & Brown at Chicago, Illinois: in 1909 he established an independent office in the same line at Washington; in 1923 he became associated with Charles J. O'Neil, under the firm name of O'Neil &

Bunn, which arrangement is still in force. Mr. Bunn is president of the National Assorting Company, and is the owner of his home in Washington, acquired by purchase. He accepts the faith of the Baptist Church, but is not a member of any religious society; he is a member of the Columbia Country Club; in political principle, a Democrat, not a politician; he is unmarried.

Elizabeth Sprague Bunn, born 12 September 1895, married in 1917 Ensign Eustace L. Adams, a descendant of President John Quincy Adams; he drove an ambulance in France for months before the United States entered the World war; joined the La Fayette Escadrille, flying corps and when the United States declared war joined the American naval aviation forces. He is now an executive with Popular Science Monthly magazine, and resides in Montclair, New Jersey.

518

Milo Bailey Bunn, son of Paul Vernon Bunn, was born 24 August 1897; he enlisted in the World war, in Company L' 138th Missouri regiment, from the officers' training camp at Doniphan, and was commissioned as lieutenant; served in France until after the armistice, and was slightly wounded and gassed. He is an office executive with the United Cigar Stores Company, with headquarters in 18th street, New York City. He married in 1917 Bertha Gore of Webster Grove, Missouri.

Lila Pearl Bunn, daughter of Taylor Bunn, born 2 September 1891 at Fairfax, Georgia, married 14 November 1917 at Fairfax, Ware County, Georgia, Robert Bernard Zachry, who was born 2 March 1889 at Eatonton, Putnam County, Georgia, son of Abner Rowan and Martha Ann (Singleton) Zachry;

the last named was a daughter of Samuel and Ann Singleton. Robert B. Zachry received a high school education and, at the age of 18 years, entered a furniture store, and is now operating a furniture store at Waycross, Ware County, Georgia, where he built his home. He is a Methodist in religion, is a member of the B. P. O. Elks and a Shriner in the Masonic order. Children:

At the age of 17 years he began teaching in the free schools of the adjoining county of Wayne. He is now city salesman for the firm of Sehon, Stevenson & Company of Huntington, where he has erected his home. He is a member of the Methodist Church and a member of the Masonic fraternity; in politics, a Democrat. He married 21 December 1904 at Huntington Sarah Osborn, born there in October 1885, daughter of Albert Osborn, a farmer, and his wife, Ellen Powers. Children:

- i Arno L. Bunn, born 1905, unmarried
- ii Leo B. Bunn, born 1907, unmarried

APPENDIX ATHE JOURNAL OF JOSIAH HOLLISTER

a Revolutionary soldier, giving first-hand knowledge of the experiences and sufferings of our forebears in the struggle for American independence, together with an outline of his ancestry and career in civil life.

The Hollister family was seated in Gloucester, Somerset and Wilts Counties in England, and is among the early ones of New England; the patriotism, preserverance and fortitude of many of its members are well illustrated in the journal below.

John Hollister, a native of England, born 1612, came to America about 1642 and immediately became prominent in the Town of Wethersfield, Conneticut, serving often as deputy to the general court; in March 1659 he was lieutenant of the local militia company. Presumably his home was in that part of Wethersfield which is now Glastonbury; his death is recorded in Wethersfield, in April 1665. He married Joanna, daughter of Hon. Richard and Joanna Treat, a sister of Govenor Robert Treat.

John Hollister, eldest son of John and Joanna, born about 1644, was one of the principal men of Glastonbury (that part of ancient Wetersfield lying east of Connecticut river), where he died 24 November 1711. He married 20 November 1667 Sarah Goodrich, daughter of William and Sarah (Marvin) Goodrich, pioneers of Glastonbury, the latter a daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Marvin, prominent early settlers of Hartford.

Thomas Hollister, second son of John and Sarah, born 14 January 1672, was a weaver residing in Glastonbury, a deacon of the Church, and died 12 October 1741. He married Dorothy, daughter of Joseph Hills of Glastonbury, born about 1677, died

5 October 1741, just a week before her husband. Their eldest child,

Josiah Hollister, born 7 June 1696, lived in Glastonbury, and was buried there 3 January 1749. In 1742 he was one of 53 shareholders in the town of Sharon, Connecticut, his portion costing £650, a large sum in those days. He married 18 January 1718 Martha Miller, daughter of William Miller of Glastonbury; she died 12 July 1777.

Samuel Hollister, third son of Josiah and Martha, was born 7 November 1723 in Glastonbury and settled in the Town of Goshen, Connecticut, where he was a farmer and died 18 February 1771. He married Jemima Phelps, born 30 July 1729 in Sharon, probably a daughter of Timothy and Hannah (Calkins) Phelps of Hebron, Connecticut. Their second son, Josiah Hollister, born 19 March 1754, was the soldier of the Revolution, whose journal follows, together with his weather records of 1816. For some time, after peace came, he lived in Cairo, Greene County, New York, whence he removed, in 1806, to Ovid, Seneca County, same State. In all these movements he was accompanied by his sons, Samuel L. and Josiah Hollister. In 1811 they moved to Cattaraugus County, same State, locating first in Franklinville, and moved in 1816 to Great Valley. Having found a satisfactory location in the town of Mansfield, same county, they located there in March 1821, on the east part of Lot 14, traveling with a sled drawn by oxen. About one mile west of Ellicottville, they turned north and cut their way three miles through heavy timber to the site desired. A temporary house was made by rolling up logs and covering with hemlock bark. In the autumn a permanent house of logs was constructed, this, also, being roofed with hemlock bark, and was occupied for several years. In the spring following, they cleared up five acres of land belonging to a neighbor, previously chopped over, and received as compensation the ashes produced by burning the timber and whatever they could raise as first crop; they planted one half with corn and the balance with oats; bears were plentiful in the region at that time, and they destroyed most of the corn. Here, Josiah Hollister remained until his death, which occurred at the home of his son, Samuel L. Hollister, 4 July 1832, in his 79th year. His last resting place is one of several unmarked graves in the old cemetery at Eddyville, Cattaraugus County, New York; if its location could be identified, his descendants would have erected a suitable monument long before now. He married (1) Mehitabel, daughter of William Andrews; she died 22 January 1783; he married (2) Naomi Tredwell. Her eldest child,

Samuel L. Hollister, born 29 October 1788, died 29 June 1849 in Mansfield, New York. He married Sybil Norton, born 24 May 1792, died 31 December 1884, fifteenth child of Miles Norton of Goshen. The history of the Norton family in America begins with Thomas Norton, born 1593, who was warden of the Church at Ockley, Surrey, England; there he married in 1625 Grace Wells. He came to America with a company from Ockley in 1639, landing at Boston and going to Guilford, Connecticut. His eldest child,

Thomas Norton, settled at Saybrook, Connecticut, before 22 November 1661, and died in Durham, same State, after 25 November 1712. He married 8 May 1671 Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Mason of Saybrook. Their third son,

Samuel Norton of Saybrook, born 6 November 1681, removed to Durham in 1704 and died there 13 July 1767. In 1738 he purchased one proprietor's share in the town of Goshen, Connecticut. He married 13 March 1713 Dinah (Birdsey), Beach, widow of Benjamin Beach, born 1688, in Stratford, same State, and died 17 September 1765 in Durham. Their second son,

Colonel Ebenezer Norton, was born 30 December 1715 in Durham and, in the summer of 1739, settled in Goshen, where he died 15 March 1785. He married in 1740 Elizabeth, daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Parmlee) Baldwin of Guilford, born 11 December 1722, died 16 April 1811; both were buried in the East Street cemetery at Goshen. Their eldest child, Miles Norton, born 30 March 1741, died 17 September 1795 and was buried in East Street cemetery. He married (1) 14 December 1758 Esther, daughter of Joseph Norton; married (2) 18 September 1766 Sybil Andrews; married (3) Anne Agard, who survived him and, in 1810, moved to Western New York, and died 4 December 1830 at Nunda, in that State. He had, altogether, 18 children, of whom 15 were present at his funeral. The fifteenth child, Sybil, became the wife of Samuel L. Hollister as above noted. Their daughter, Lucy Anna Hollister, was the wife of Delavan Bunn (see No. 130), and was the ancestress of a large progeny, many of whom are now located on the Pacific Slope.

JOURNAL OF JOSIAH HOLLISTER (1754-1832)

Written during the latter years of his life, on the last (reversed) pages of an account book which contained the record of his small business transactions with his neighbors, beginning about 1797 and ending in 1816. (*See foot note.) This book

NOTE: *Interesting matter is to be found in these accounts. During the early years all money items are given in pounds, shillings and pence of the depreciated value of New York currency at the time of the Revolution, the value of the shilling being reckoned at 12 1-2 cents United States has been preserved by descendants and came into possession of his grand-son, Miles Hollister, who settled in Rice County, Minnesota, about 1859. The lastnamed emulated the patriotism of his grandfather, and was a lieutenant in the war of 1861-65, serving at Northwestern forts in guarding the frontier from Indian attacks; he afterward moved to Alviso, California, where he lived to be more than 90 years old. At his death the book was left to his daughter, Mrs. Belle Hollister Davel, from whom it was borrowed in order that this copy might be made, and then returned to her at Alviso.

This copy follows closely the concise language of the author, varying from the original in the division into sentences and paragraphs. Some corrections have been made in spelling, while other words are permitted to retain the forms of an earlier day than ours.

Copied 1926, by his great-grandson, Romanzo N. Bunn.

money. This was known at that time and for many years thereafter as the "York shilling." It is possible that even now, in some localities one might hear an elderly person refer to a half dollar as "four shillings." As the British penny was divided into four farthings, so when it came to be the practice to write money values in dollars and cents, the entries in this book often contained half cents.

..All prices given appear exceedingly low as compared with any quoted in more recent days. A laborer was usually credited with a wage of 4s. or 50c for a day's work, which was doubled if he worked with his own team. The work in pioneer days was heavy, and the days long. Actual money was rarely passed, it being practically unknown to these settlers. The shoemaker, who probably lived on a farm, as there is a record of his breeding swine, was credited with seventy-five cents in work for making a pair of shoes. It is not shown, however, who furnished the leather.

During two years Mr. Hollister was assessor of the township of Olean, in the south eastern corner of Cattaraugus County. The pay was $1.50 per day, for actual work done.

Personally appeared before me the undersigned Enos Eddy Jr. and Miner G. Larabee, of the town of Mansfield, County and State aforesaid, and being duly sworn according to the law, testify and say that at and previous to the time of the death of Josiah Hollister, the subject of the following Journal, they lived neighbors to him, and that they have heard him say that the following Journal was true and was written for his own satisfaction and that of his friends; that they are well acquainted with his handwriting, and verily believe he wrote the same, and that he was a man of the strictest integrity, and his Journal is entitled to the fullest credit, and that he died on the fourth day of July, 1832.

ENOS EDDY, JR.

MINER G. LARABEE

Sworn and subscribed this 7th day of August, 1833, before me, Israel Day, a Judge of the Cattaraugus County Common Pleas.

Cattaraugus county was a part of the Holland Land Grant, which covered all western New York, with the exception of a strip one mile wide along the Niagara river. The proprietors were represented on the ground by Mr. Joseph Ellicott, a civil engineer and business man, who surveyed and sold the property. The assessor was employed with Mr. Ellicott during five days each year, listing each separate tract owned by the company, the settlers being so few at the time that the entry: "Taking the assessment of the inhabitants", was charged at only two days. Thus the service in this important office brought in $10.50 per annum. Another item of possible interest is that the last series of entries discloses the owner of the book as a retailer of whiskey. This was sold on charge account to his neighbors, at the rate of $1.50 per gallon, though single sales rarely reached that quantity, the usual charge being for quarts, pints and gills, but always at the exact rate of $1.50 per gallon. The total quantity charged is roughly estimated at two barrels. The source of the supply is not known, though the Allegheny region is supposed to have held many stills in an early day.

I, Josiah Hollister, was born at Sharon, in Litchfield County, Connecticut, March 19, 1754. My father's name was Samuel Hollister, my mother's name before her marriage was Jemima Phelps. I was the second son and fourth childe. I had a brother two years younger than myself who died when I was only four years old, and he but two. Although I was so young I can well remember that he could talk plaine, was very forward, and that I was greatly affected by his death. His name was [Samuel, after my father's name.

Nothing very special occurred til I was ten years old. In October, the 27th day, 1764, my mother died and left an infant son about ten days old. He was baptised at her funeral by the name of Ichabod, signifying that the glory is departed. He died a few days later. I felt greatly distressed at the loss of my mother, but I had reason to hope that my loss was her gane. After my mother's death my two older sisters kept my father's house til his second marriage, which was January 1st, 1766. He married widow Mary Chamberlin, by whome he had two children, a daughter and son, Rhoda and Timothy. He lived with her five years, one month and eight days, and died the 8th day of February, 1771, in the forty-seventh year of his age. I was then about seventeen years of age. I took charge of the farm one year, and then the farm was divided, and my step mother let her third to Samuel Smith, lived with him one year, and then she married Mr. Jonathan Sprague. April, 1773, when I was eighteen years old, I went to live with my brother-in-law that married my oldest sister, to learn the shoemaker's and tanner's trade, with whome I lived one year, but not liking the trade, I quit him and went to work on my own land for two years, which brought me to the memorable year 1775, in which was begun the war which is called

THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR

I then enlisted as a soldier in Major Samuel Elmour's company, Colonel Hinman's regiment, raised by the then colony, now state of Connecticut, in the beginning of May, and the latter part of May we had marching orders to go to the northward. We marched to Egermont the first day; the second day to Clinekill; the third day to Millar's, Greenbush; the fourth day to Sharp's, seven miles above Albany. The fifth day, being Sunday, we marched to Stone Robbe, where we attended Divine service. We had an excellent sermon, preached by the Rev. Mr. Graham, and after the meeting we crossed the river to Half Moon, and marched to Bryan's at Stillwater. The sixth day we marched to Fort Edward, and the seventh day to Fort George.

The eighth day we went on board a ferry and crossed Lake George, and the next morning marched into Ticonderoga, and were saluted by the firing of cannon. We stayed in garrison at this place about a fortnight, when Major Elmour was ordered to march to Crown Point to take command there; which so enraged Benedict Arnold, who had assisted in taking these fortresses from the British, that he threatened to give up the sloop and surrender to the British, and accordingly he went on board the sloop with some of his men, and sailed down the lake. In passing Crown Point the channel was close to the land, so that he was obliged to hug the point, where was a redout and a number of cannon placed. I was then on sentry. One of the gunners came with his lighted match, hailed him, and demanded where he was bound. He made little reply. The gunner ordered him to drop anchor. He said he would go to the proper anchoring place. The gunner again ordered him to let go the anchor immediately, or he would blow him through. Anold then let go the anchor, and walked the deck for about an hour, in as great a passion as I ever saw a man. From that time I ever had a dislike to him, so that it was not surprising to me when he turned out to be an infamous traitor.

We kept guard here and sent scouts down the lake until about the first of September. One of our Lieutenants took command of a scout and went down the lake, and on his return landed at Gillener's crick. The Lieutenant, whose name was Oliver Parmely, went to the house and sat talking with Esq. Gillener, while his men were busy at the mouth of the crick, a fishing. A man came, around with two Indians with him. His name was White, and he had been formerly Sheriff at Albany. He asked Esq. Gillener to speak with him. The Esq. said: "You are on a bad plan," and ketched his sword and arms. Lieut. Parmley called his men, who immediately came and took them all. They took them on board of their boat and brought them off, so that instead of making the Esq. prisoner, they found they were prisoners themselves. They took with them a brass blunderbus, which would carry a ball as big as a hen's egg. As soon as the boat hove in sight of Crown Point, they began to fire the blunderbus, and fired every few minutes til they reached Crown Point. The next day the prisoners were taken to Ticonderoga before General Schuyler. The General shook hands with the Indians. White offered to shake hands with the General, who said, "Damm you, don't offer your hand to me." "I believe you don't know me," said White. "I know you too well, by God," said the General. The Indians were discharged, and White was sent to Albany.

About the first of September we sailed down the lake to besiege St. John's. General Montgomery came on with his army and laid siege to the fort. A division besieged Chambly and took it. Colonel Allen at the same time went to besiege Montreal with a party of volunteers, and was taken and carried to England. We had a long siege of seven and forty days, and then the garrison surrendered themselves prisoners of war.

Soon after the surrender of the forts we were discharged, went on board the boats and crossed back over the lake, about the 23rd of November. The 25th the wind was very high. The waves ran like mountains, but through the goodness of Providence we arrived safely at Crown Point. We ran sixty miles that day. The 26th we sailed to Ticonderoga, sixteen miles. General Schuyler gave us a pass to return home. We took a large birch bark canoe on our shoulders at Ticonderoga, in order to cross Lake George in it, but the officers went forward and found a barge at the landing, and sent back word for us to leave the canoe; and glad was I, for it was a tottlish thing, and my shoulder ached so bad I was glad to be relieved. We came to the landing, and Captain Levenston (who was going on an express to Congres) ordered us all to get into the barge. The sentinel demanded an order from General Schuyler or Captain Curtis, as it was his order not to let any boat go. Captain Levenston said he had orders. The sentinel wished to see them. The Captain replied: "No damm you, I will not allow you the favor," and began to cast off the boat. The sentinel cocked his gun and forbid his taking it. The Captain took up another gun and cocked it. The sentinel asked what he should tell them if we took the boat. "Why, tell them that Captain Levenston took it." We pushed off and took our oars. We had not gone far before we saw a company of men marching to a point, full speed, in order to get ahead of us, but we sprang upon our oars with all our might and got out of their reach. We started about eleven o'clock, rowed across the lake, a distance of thirty-six miles, and arrived at Fort George before sunset

NOTE: When I first began to write my history, I little thought of writing onely a record of my famely, but it (has) swellen on my hands to a little vollum. But to proceed with my history.

The next morning, after drawing some provisions, I set out for home with two of my companions, and traveled to Fort Miller, it being Monday. Tuesday we marched to Saartoga and put up at Sherwood's where were some of the British soldiers we had taken at St. John's. Sherwood I believed to be a Tory. I would not stay to breakfast, but went on about four miles, and breakfasted on oysters. We traveled on Wednesday to Half Moon Ferry, crossed the river and put up for the night. Thursday morning we took breakfast at Stone Robbe, and traveled that day to Greenbush. On Friday we traveled to Nobletown, and put up at Christopher Ray's. Saturday we traveled to Egermount, and put up at Spur's tavern, where we fell in company with a soldier that came from the camp at Boston, who traveled with us on Sunday to Sharon.

Thus, after an absence of about six month, I came safely to the town of my nativity, and put up on Sunday night at Mr. Jonathan Sprague's who married my step mother. The old gentleman when he attended family prayers returned thanks very heartily for my preservation through the dangers of a campaign, and for my safe return home. The old man I believe was a pious man, and has gone peacefully to receive the fruits of his labors.

The winter following (after having visited my friends and relations) I went to live at the home of Mrs. Williams, where I spent my time very agreeably til the 1st of April, 1776. I then worked for Capt. Jacob Bogardis about six weeks, and then went to live at Litchfield with Noah Garnsey and Amos Morse, alternately each week til July, a few days after Independence was declared, when the militia was called to New York. I went in Capt. Harculus Bewell's company of militia to New York, where my duty was not hard. I had to cook for the officers, serve as barber and assist the adjutant in making out regimental returns. I never mounted guard but twice, when I turned out voluntarily.

Some time in August the British landed a large body of troops on Long Island, where they had a bloody battle with the Americans, and a great many were killed on both sides. General Washington, finding his retreat was like to be cut off, ordered a retreat in the night and brought his army safely off, unpercieved by the enemy. The next day after the retreat from the island we were ordered to Horns Hook, opposite Hell Gate, where we lay til I was taken sick. I was sent out of camp with other sick in a waggon across King's Bridge, where we found a horse that was sent for Charles Grant, who had gone home another way and missed him. Those with me put their baggage on the horse and set me on him. We traveled on slowly as far as West Chester the first day after we left Horns Hook, where we put up for the night. The man who kept the tavern where we stopt was a cross, morose fellow, who would not allow the sick to stay in the house nor in the barn. I went into the old church, which had been occupied as a hospital, but it was so dirty I could not bear to stay in it. I went to another tavern, where I found the woman more kind. She gave me some warm coffee, but I could not keep it down, but puked it up again. I had a very sick night that night, but in the morning they put me on the horse again and we traveled on a piece before breakfast. We stopt at a tavern, I being very weake, they opened the gate for me to ride into the dore yard. The Landlord came out and asked what we meant—whether we meant to take possession of his house. Our Lieutenant who was with us told him that we called to get breakfast, and the reason why we came into the gate was because I was very weake, and they meant to take me off near the Dore. To this he replied: “Begone out of the gate. I cannot be plagued with soldiers, nor I won’t.” We went to another tavern and took breakfast, where we were received very kindly. After breakfast we traveled to White Plains, and put up at Joseph Clap’s a good old Quaker, with whom I stayed a week or ten days. The old lady was very kind to me, or perhaps I should not have been here now. It was thought not prudent for me to go on, I was so weake, but to stay til they went home and sent my brother-in-law after me. Having a kind old lady to take care of me, I thought it best to stay. I was so ill that if I had been on the road I could not have stood it.

After I began to gaine a little Friend Clap was agoing to send his son with a shay to carry a sick man to Bedford, about eleven miles. I concluded to go along with him, which almost overcame me. When we came into Bedford town (within half a mile of where he proposed to leave me) I desired the younge man that drove the shay to stop at a tavern and get me some drink, which he did. The landloard came out and asked me to come in. I told him I could not get out, for if I did I could not get in again. “Oh, come in,” he said, “You are almost gone. You cannot stand it much longer if you don’t stop.” I answered: “Well sir, can you let me stay here a few days?” “Oh yes, I never turn any man out of dores, especially a sick man." He helped me out of the shay, led me into the house, showed me a bed, and desired me to lie down, which I did, but I never was in such distress before or since, to this day. There happened to be a doctor in the house, to whom the landlady spoke: "I think it your duty to do something for that man, whether he is able to pay you or not." The doctor came into the room to me, gave me some medison, left some to take the next morning, went back to the landlady, and told her to take good care of me or I would leave my bones under the hill meaning the burying ground. The good woman made me a sirrup of elderberries, loaf sugar and French brandy and gave it to me, which I think gave me relief. At night they put me to bed in the chamber. I believe it was the first time that ever I was delerious. It appeared that the chamber was full of soldiers with guns and bayonets, thrashing round the room and on my bed, which trobled me so much it seemed that I could not live. My landlady dreamed a dream that frightened her. She awakened her husband and wished him to lite a candle and go up and see if I wanted anything. So he came up with lited candle and gave me some drink, then the soldiers dispersed, and all was calm again. The woman nursed me as she would her own sone, and I soon began to amend. In about two or three days my brother-in-law, Noah Garnsey, came after me. He came in the forenoon, and the next day we started for Litchfield, and left my kinde landloard and landlady, not without some regrets, whose name I do not remember, but I shall ever remember them with gratitude. We arrived at Litchfield the third day after we left Bedford, without anything special of note, only that the first night we tried to get in at an old Tory's and he would not let us stay. Another soldier, being in company, laid down the rules to him very sharply for refusing to let a soldier stay in his house, who had ventured his life for his country, and a sick man too. A man standing by invited us home with him, and used us very kindly.

A little while after I came home to my brother Garnsey's house, one day I walked out into the field, and when I came in a man by the name of Hubbel sat in the house, and saluted me thus: "How is't Whig, han't you got your belly full of Whigging on't? I don't pity you! See what you get by fighting against your King. It won't be long before the damned rebels will have to knock under. I have been hauled around by your committys, but I know I shall have revenge. I know I shall see the day that I shall keep the damned rebels up in jaile, as I have been. I was so weake I could hardly walk. I trembled like a pople leaf. I felt that I never wanted my strength so much as I did then. I told him he had better take care what he said, or he might be haled before the committee again, "For you are an old Tory." He answered: "Yes I am a Tory. I glory in the name. Tory signifies a friend of Constitutional law and the Church of England." Not long after the aforesaid Hubbel was enoculated for the small pox. He had some pimples which were thought by some to be the itch. He, thinking he had had the small pox, swore that he would "spread it amongst the damned rebels," but he caught it in the natural way and died with it. Before he died his head was swollen to an enormous size. There was no appearance of eyes in his head, So died this greate boaster, which ought to be a warning and an example to all that are enemies of their country.

After about a month I was restored to health again, and made my home with my brother-in-law the next winter, working at different places. I became acquainted with Mehetable Andrews, daughter of William Andrews, and the 12th of June, 1777 we were married by Esq. Mathews, of Westbury. After this I had a severe spell of lameness occasioned by a swelling, which confined me about a month. In July we began to keep house on the little farm that my father left me.

About this time our frontiers were greatly distressed by the enemy at the northward. This year we had frequent alarms. One in April, which should have been mentioned before, the enemy came out as far as Danbury (where was large store of provisions) and burned the town and stores, and, most heathen like, burned the house for public worship. The country was greatly alarmed, and all that were friends of their country turned out. Some had a severe engagement with them, in which we lost some brave officers and worthy citizens, but so many coming from a distance that they did not arrive in season the enemy got on board again, but not without some loss. In the month of August a party of Hessians and Torys came to Bennington in order to burn the town, but the militia turned out in Vermont and Massachusetts, and some from Connecticut, and took or killed the whole of them, under the command of General Stark. The number of Hessians that were taken were about seven hundred.

Not long after Burgoyne came on with his army, but his progress was stopped at Saratoga by the brave General Gates, with a small body of standing troops and a large body of militia, which composed his army. They had some warm engagements, but at length Burgoyne with all his army was compelled to surrender as prisoners of war, on the 17th of October, in the year that contains the three 7's. After this the militia had a small respite.

About the same time the British shipping came up the North River as far as Catskill, but hearing that Burgoyne was taken, they descended the river again to New York. If they had rushed on, and not have stopped to burn Esopus, the Americans would have been defeated. I now had so much respite that I could attend to business and make my cider. I saved enough for my own use, and sold enough for my bread.

June 2nd, 1778, my wife had a son. We called him Samuel. This summer I was not called away in the militia, but attended to my own business. I raised a good crop of corn, put in four acres of wheat, and fattened four hogs, so that we lived comfortably. The next spring, 1779, I sold my little farm to Samuel Smith and took a journey into Vermont in search of land. I bought ninety-two acres of land in Rupert, for which I gave my horse, and returned to my family. After I came home I planted four acres of corn and did my harvest. After harvest I went again to Vermont in order to make preparations to move my family, but when I came there I found there was like to be a dispute about the title, although I believed my title was good and legal. One John Fisk offered to buy it of me on his own risque, and give me about double what I gave. I took one horse and obligation for money and another young horse, which I hired kept. I left the note with Jeremiah Phelps to collect. He collected the money and sold the young horse, and I never got a cent. The money was ten pounds—good money. I returned home and harvested my corn, and on the 29th of October, 1779, my wife was put to bed with a daughter. We called her name Ruth. After she was put to bed she was comfortable for two days, but she caught cold and had a severe fit of sickness.

Some time in the month of November I set out to drive my cattle and sheep to Vermont, having previously agreed to take a farm of Captain Smith, of Rupert. I got as far as New Cannan, and there came a snow with hail and rain, and after it very cold, which made it so slippery I could not proceed. I was obliged to hire them kept, and persuaded to shift my course to Ballston (N. Y.). Jeremiah Phelps, having agreed for some land, he said I should have part of it.

I then returned to Sharon, and prepared to move to Ballston. Before we moved my wife wished to go to see her friends. I took my sleigh and horses and set out to see them, it being about thirty miles. The first day we traveled about ten miles. The snow being very deep, we went ten miles to get five. The next day we set out again, and had not gone more than a mile and a half before we got mired down in the snow. I had to take out one horse and put before the other, and so go on till we got down the mountain, where we were told that after we had crossed the bridge we should come to a good road, but we found there was no road open where we wanted to go. We were obliged to turn up the river, thinking to find a good road to the upper bridge, but before we got half way there the road was entirely blocked up, and what to do then we knew not. A woman advised us to go across the river on the ice to Elisha Hollister's, which we did, and stayed that night about four miles from where we set out in the morning. The next day Garsham Hollister went up the river on the ice to the upper bridge, and then we went on some way without any obstruction, although we came to where I had to put one horse before the other, and so got down to Blew Swamp, where we stayed all night. The next day we proceeded to Noah Garnsey's, eleven miles, without much obstruction, I then being within three miles of my wife's father's, though I had to go round about twelve or fourteen miles to get there.

While at her father's house I shall pass over things of small consequence, lest it swell my narrative too much. Just as we were making ready to return my wife was taken very sick. We sent for Doctor Hilton, who, being pretty much destitute of medicine, ordered a compound medicine, and sent me to the apothecary to get it, which I got at Doctor Smith's, in Litchfield. I returned again and carried the medicine. She was so ill that it was thought not best to move her, but for me to return to Sharon and make ready to move, which I did, leaving her at her father's house.

I hired a man to go with me with sleigh and horse to Albany. From there I hired my goods taken to Lenson's, who lived eight miles from Schonacnada (probably Schenectady), and after I had got to my journey's end, I returned and fetched them myself.

I went in with Ebenezer Sprague, that married my step mother's daughter. By this time I thought it best to have as little to do with Jeremiah Phelps as possibly I could. So I bought a lot of land containing ninety-five acres, made some payment and took a bond for a deed upon the payment of the remainder. When the ways got settled in the spring, I went on horseback and brought my wife and children to Ballston (that part now called Milton). We had not been there long before we had an alarm. The enemy came to Johnstown, within twenty-four miles, burned some houses and carried off some prisoners, which alarmed our settlement, and some moved off, but I was resolved to stay as long as anybody.

After things got a little still I went to work, being very well pleased with the country. We used to attend meetings on the Sabbath, at the house of Ebenezer Sprague. We had no preaching, but we used to sing, pray and read. I raised some corn, worked out fifteen days havesting, for which I had fifteen bushels of wheat, and prepared three acres for rye. I cleared off three acres of new land and put it in to wheat, and prepared three acres for rye.

About the 12th of October we had information that the enemy had taken Fort Ann, and that a deserter said a party had gone to Ballston, though he did not know where the place lay. Upon this information we had a council, sent for a company of Schonacnada (Schenectady) militia, and being very stupid, we got lulled again into security.

THE CAPTURE AND IMPRISONMENT

Dreadful to relate, on the 17th of October, 1780, in the morning about two hours before day, the enemy came in like a flood, burning and destroying all before them. The first that I knew they burst open my dores and rushed in. I, thinking they might have been Indians, said "Sago! Sago!" One answered "There are no Indians here. You needn't 'Sago,' Damme you. Get up and leave the house before the Indians come." By telling me to leave the house before the Indians came, I did not know but they might be Sconacnada (Schenectady) militia. I asked them who they were. "Damn you we will will show you who we are. We are King's men." I said, "Why do you trouble me? I moved a hundred miles to get clear of fighting." They answered, "We know who are King's men, who are friends and who are not. Leave the house immediately, or it will be the worse for you."

I then took down a pare of Philidelphia britches and a jack coat that hung behind the bed. One twitched them away from me, and said: "God damn you, you must not think to take everything, and hurried me out of the house without suffering me to put on anything save a pare of lining (linen) trowsers. I took up my little son, my wife took the other child, and we left the house. They bade me give the child to my wife, but the child clung fast about my neck. I asked them to show some pity; "What can this woman do with two small children." One presented his gun to my breast, and swore with an oath that he would not be plagued with me any longer. My wife begged them to spare my life. Another struck up the muzzle of his gun and haled me away to the guard. But judge what my feelings were at this time to see my house in flames, my wife and children turned out of doors, almost naked; myself haled away among savages and men more inhuman than they. But here I must not omit to mention one of my neighbors, Isaac Stow, who was inhumanly massacred for attempting to make his escape. An Indian sent his spear at him and struck it into his back, then caught it and held him, and smote his tomahawk into his head. It was dreadful to behold the destruction that was made. They plundered the valuable clothing, burned the houses, barns and hay stacks, killed hogs and cattle, and destroyed all before them. It was judged they burned two thousand bushels of wheat. Such a company of men I never saw before nor since. They were the offscouring of the earth; a parcel of torys and thieves who had left their county to escape the halter. I thought I had heard swearing before, but I never heard anything to compare with them. The horrid oaths and blasphemy were enuf to make one shudder. It is beyond the arte of pen to picture them out, or the tongue of eloquence in the greatest orator to give them a true description. Their commander was one Monroe. I have heard of him not long since in Canada. He is a poor old, drunken, sore eyed vagabond, who goes strowling rounde the streets.

It was a very cold, frosty morning. The mud puddles were skimmed over with ice. I was barefooted; the ice cut my feet so that they bled, and to add to our misery, we were insulted by the torys and called "damned rebels"; that we might be thankful they had spared our lives. They drove off some cattle. When they had gone seven or eight miles into the woods they killed all but one yoke of oxen. They sliced off part of the hides and ordered the prisoners to take some beef, which we did, and carried it on a hooked stick in our hands. We had no way of cooking it, only to stick it on a stick and roast it. When we camped at night they killed the other oxen and we got a little more of the beef. With what we had before and what we got then, it lasted us three days.

The next morning we were paraded, and were pinioned, and the guard had their orders that in case the "rebels" (as they termed them) pursued, for every man to kill the prisoner he had the charge of. "This is the order, and see that you put it into execution." In the mean time they swore two old men, one lame man and a boy, and let them go back, and gave them orders if they met any pursuing, they (the guard) would kill all of the prisoners immediately. They had not gone more than half a mile before they met the advance guard of a party that was coming on. They told them what the orders were with respect to the prisoners, and they thought prudent to return. We were eight days marching through the wilderness, and having provisions for only three days, there were five days that the chief we had to support nature was to boil hemlock boughs and drink the tea. On the way we came to where we had left some provisions. One Joseph Bonner, having got his, I asked him if he would give me a piece of his bisquit. He answered: "No, by the Lord Jesus Christ, if God Almighty should come in the shape of my father, I would not give him any."

At length we arrived at Crown Point, having marched through wilderness, over hills and mountains and through rivers. We had to wade all of the branches of the North river. The main branch was fifty or sixty rods wide, waist deep, the current very strong, the stones very slippery, which made it very difficult to wade.

At Crown Point we drew one day's provisions for the first time, and the next morning were put on board the ship Mariah and sailed to St. John, then marched to Chamblee, where we stayed one night and continued on to Montreal, were marched through the city, and put into an old French church for a few days til they had prepared a long store, one hundred and twenty feet long, which they converted into a prison. The next day I was taken out by William Grant to work at the mills they were building on an Island opposite Montreal, where I laboured eighteen days for one shilling a day, Halifax currency. The weather then came on very cold. I was then put into close confinement through the winter, under a Hessian guard. Our provisions were scant and poor and our clothing thin, so that we suffered both cold and hunger.

The tory officers would often come to try to enlist us, and some not firm in the cause enlisted. One of the Bracknags, who was a Tory Captain, came to me one day in sheep's clothing, though at heart he was a reavenous wolf. In a very plausible way, with much pretended friendship, he advised me to enlist and serve the King. In doing so, he said, I would secure the King's favour; otherwise I would be treated as a rebel. I told him I could not, for I had a wife and children, and if I should, I would never see them again. He said: "My friend, you seem to be a smart, likely man. I am sorry you stand so much in your own light as to venture to be treated as a rebel. I expect to see my friends again, when we have conquered all the rebels." I told him if he called the Americans rebels, they would have a hard row to hoe before they conquered them. One Captain Jones came into the prison, and one Daniel King enlisted. I passed by and smiled, for King was a low lived fellow, and we were all glad to get rid of him. Jones saw me smile, and said: "There is a good natured looking man. I want a company of such men. Will you enlist?" I answered: "Yes." "Well, set down your name." I said: "I'll stay till I get home, then I'll enlist very soon. I have not been used well enough to enlist" (here). "Why, how have you been used?" "You came upon me in the night, hauled me out of doors, burned my house and turned my wife and children out. I will see you all hanged before I'll enlist to support such a government as that." They all gave a shout and Jones went out with his booty.

I shall pass over many things, lest they swell my narrative too much. During the first winter we suffered with cold and hunger beyond expression. We were guarded by a Hessian guard, who some of them were destitute of all humanity. Particularly one of their corporals who, every time he mounted guard, would with his rattan, lash some of the prisoners. We made complaint to the commissary, who ordered that he should no more mount the prison guard. Through the winter we drew fresh provisions, which were very poor. In the spring after the provision fleet came in we drew salt provisions and not being provided with room to exercise, it gave us the scurvy, many being unable to help themselves. In June a number of us were ordered to the Three Rivers general hospital, where we remained about six weeks. Sixteen of us were sent on a French vessel, under a Hessian guard consisting of a Sergeant and twelve men. The guard pulled off their accoutrements (the hole (hold) being filled with staves) stuck their swords and bayonets in the staves and hung there cachout boxes on them, set up their guns in the hole, and kept no sentry. When they came to anchor in the night, the Hessians rolled themselves up in the main sail and went to sleep. We also lay down on the deck. An Irish passenger came to us and said: "Boys, now is your time. Rise, arm yourselves, take the boat and go ashore. I have but five pounds in money. You shall have that if you will go, and I'll not lift a finger to prevent you from going." But there were two of our company that were unable help themselves, and we were afraid if we went and left them they would be killed. But we were resolved that if we had such a chance when we returned to improve it; but when we returned we were strictly guarded by an English guard to the prison that we were taken from. We remained in this prison till the 17th of October (1781) when we were taken out and the prison occupied for a store. The day before we were taken out, they were all taken out of the upper loft, and they began to bring in the stores. There were three British soldiers that were bringing in the stores, and as it began to be dusk in the evening, one of the soldiers was coming in with his arms full of carrot tobacco, ran against me, gave a wink, and turned his head the other way. I took off one. The others, taking the hint, I believe as many as thirty were taken. Each carrot weighed about five pounds. We were taken up the river forty-five miles to Cote (Coteau) du Lac, and put in barracks on an island. The fall and winter we had the liberty of the island, which contained about forty or fifty acres, we being under a Tory guard. In the month of February one

McGalpin, a Tory officer, commanded the guard. He was a spiteful malicious fellow. One day he ordered one of the prisoners to clean the snow away from his door yard. He answered that he was no gentleman's servant, but a prisoner of war, and that the officer had no right to order him to work. He (Mc Galpin) then ordered him to be brought into his room, gave him seventy-five strokes with his rattan, and put him into irons in a cold room, where snow and ashes were about knee deep. He then ordered a corporal and file of men to bring him one from each room, to the number of twenty-two. He ordered them to clear his door yard. They all refused. Some he gave seventy-five strokes with his rattan; some he laid neck and heels and ironed them two and two, and confined them in the cold ash house in that inclement season; and set a sentinel at the door with orders not let anyone relieve them nor hand in any fire, provisions, tobacco or water. The other prisoners, seeing them in that situation, wrapped a pair of pincers and a file in a blanket, went to the sentinel and desired to hand them to the comrade. The sentinel answered that it was against his orders to let them have anything, "but fling them in when I am walking the other way." He flung in the blanket, and by means of the pincers and file they got their irons off, crept out a back window, and each went to his own room. In the morning at roll call he (McGalpin) picked them all out, put them into one of the barrack chambers, and ordered that they should have no fire to warm them, nor anything to eat or drink, and no tobacco. But we had the advantage that we could from one chamber to another hand them hot stones, victuals, drink and tobacco. In this situation they were kept two days. Lieutenant Lyon, a prisoner, seeing their situation, went to the sergeant that had the care of us, and asked what could be done, as it would not do for the men to suffer at such a rate. The Sergeant said if Lyon would go with him, he would talk with the officer, and if he would not release the prisoners from their confinement he would take upon himself to arrest the officer and release them, although it was a bold push. They accordingly went to McGalpin, and began to talk to him on the subject. He answered: "How old do you suppose I be?" and such like impertinent answers to whatever they said. At length Mr. Lyon told him it was no trifling matter, and that they wanted a direct answer. He told them they might go to their rooms, and he would release the men. He went to the guard house and sent for the prisoners one at a time, some he beate with his rattan, some he laid head and heels, and one by the name of Herwood he hung by the neck until he was dead, to all appearances; however he came to again, and carried the mark of the rope for more than a month.

One thing should have been mentioned before. A black man by the name of Charley, that used to play on a fiddle, after the said McGalpin had confined those men in the ash house, he sent for Charley to come and play on the fiddle, that he might dance, but Charley nobly refused. He then beate him with his rattan in a most brutal manner, put a pare of handcuffs on him, and confined him in the ash house. One man by the name of Allbright, whom he had beaten with his rattan so that his back was black and blue, which looked amost shocking, showed it to Dr. Conner, who examined into the matter and retoprted him (McGalpin) to the General, who kept him under arrest against him; he was tried by a Court Martial, and his commision taken from him.

There were a number of occurrences that took place during this winter which, not having taken regular minutes, I do not remember so as to give a right description, therefore I shall pass over them, and proceed to give an account of my health. We were kept on salt provisions, which gave me the scurvy. My mouth was so sore that I could hardly eat eanything. My gooms were covered with blood blisters so that they would bleede at the least touch. I felt myself in a critical situation, with no money to get anything for my comfort. Fregitt Patchen gave me a dollar, which I esteemed a greater favour than I should twenty dollars at any other time. With it I bought some tea and some onions, which I think proved a greate relief to me. In the spring as soon as vegetables began to spring up, I used to gather greens, and by degrees my health was restored. We were allowed the privelege of making gardens on the island, which proved a help to us.

On the fourth of July we had a mind to celebrate Independence. Accordingly we gathered some green bushes and stuck them in our hats and over the barrack room door, which greatly enraged the guard, particularly Lieut. McDanolds, who commanded the guard. He ordered a sergeant to have them taken down. He came into our room and ordered the bush down. One prisoner named Fitch said: "Sergeant, it is the fourth of July. The boys have a mind to celebrate Independence." He replied: "I know it, and that is what makes me mad. I had as lief you would raise your flag on the block house. "We all turned out to role call, with the green bushes in our hats. The Lieutenant asked the sergeant what it was best to do to us. The sergeant replied: "It is best to let them alone. If you know them as well as I do, they are the willfullest set of men I ever saw. The Lieutenant gave the sentry charge not to let any go to the water with the green bushes in our hats, but the pickets they were fixing around the barracks to keep the prisoners from running away, were not quite completed, and we could get out that way to the water.

A number of the prisoners had made their escape off the island before they had completed the pickets. After they completed the pickets they thought we were secure, but we meant to let them know to the contrary. We contrived to dig out. We began to dig under the room I lived in. We began under the floor, and dug as low as as we thought proper to begin the hole to go out, and then proceeded toward the pickets, which stood eighteen feet from the barracks. It was under the berth I slept in that we went down under the floor, and so privately we carried it that the prisoners in the other rooms had no knowledge of it until we had worked at it twelve days. We had a leather shirt, and old pare of trowsers and a cap we used to put on when we went into the hole to dig, and a case knife with the blade broken about the middle, that we scratched the dirt with til we got an armful, then we would back out and scrape the dirt back with our hands, and store it under the floor.

One day as I came out of the hole and was stripping myself, a man by the name of Kelsey, who sat in his berth mending his cloaths, discovered me through a small hole, his berth being opposite mine. I thought I was secure from any discovery, having hung blankets around my berth as curtains, under the pretense of keeping off moskitos. I walked out to take the air after being two hours in the hole Kelsey met me and asked how far I had got. I told him, "I am here." "But how far have you dug your hole?" I made very strange of it. He said: "You needn't make so strange of it. I saw you come out of the hole with your leather shirt on.

I mean to be one of your party. I told him to keep it quiet, for there were Judases amongst us. I informed him I thought we had dug two-thirds of the way.

The news soon went through the barracks, which made me fear we should be betrayed. But there was an Irishman amongst us, whose name I do not recollect, who was a true hearted fellow, who went to one Van Epps, who was set to watch and give information against the prisoners and told him: "You know what is going on, and if you make any discovery, I'll as sure cut your throat as you are now alive. He repeated it with so much earnestness that Van Epps promised he would make no discovery. We pressed our business with more vigor, having a new recruit, but there came a greate fall or raine which prevented us from work for a few days. It filled the hole with water. But after the raine was over we went to work again, baled the water out of the hole, which I greatly feared would lead to discovery, but it did not. With eighteen days persevering labour we completed our work. Unfortunately for me I got sick in digging in the wet earth under ground, for it was quite muddy after the raine and having been so long sick before, they all advised me not to attempt to go. It was a greate mortification to me to give it up, but as my health was then I could not have stood it through the woods.

The day before the party went out Simon Belknap and I asked leave to go to our garden to save our salad and white mustard seede. A soldier went with us. We pulled the plants and hung them against the pickets, that the sentinal might not discover the prisoners when they went out at the hole. That day they gave us fourteen day's provisions. No doubt there was a hand of providence in this for before we used to draw provisions twice a week. That night was unusually dark, which must be ascribed to a kind Providence, for at other times it was quite light, the water running all round the island. At nine o'clock we were all ordered to go to bed, and at ten o'clock the Sergeant came round to every room and counted us to see if we were all there. After all was still they began to push their knapsacks through, with the meat they had drawn that day and what they had saved of their allowance before. Nineteen got safely out in a little more than two hours, and made floats by tying poles together with elm bark ropes they had previously prepared. All got safely off but four, who got into an eddy, and having broken their paddle, could not get to shore. They were taken off the next morning, the sun an hour high.

The next morning the Corporal went out to his hooks and lines that he had set in the river to catch fish, and finding where they had rolled down their timbers to make the floats, led to the discovery that some of the prisoners were gone. They accordingly went to viewing the pickets to see if any were moved, and came to the hole where they went out. Sargeant Morse came into the room and asked if we were all that were left, there being only myself, Zerg Norton and John Bunnell left in the room. I told him "Yes." He said: "Are there any more gone? Oh! damn it, if you know you will not tell," and went out and called roll call. We turned out to roll call, and it happened that those that were gone were on the fore part of the roll. He began to call the roll, laughed, and said: "By God, I believe they are half gone." The Lieutenant turned about and looked very surly, and went into the block house. When he (The Sergeant) had finished calling the roll he found that nineteen were gone. He then went into the block house and made his return to Lieutenant McDanolds, who came into the room where I was and wanted to have the place shown him. By this time the room was full of prisoners and soldiers. He asked Sergeant Morse if all were gone out of the room, and was answered "Yes." "What, not one left?" "No, damn the one." (I suppose he (the Sergeant) thought he would fall on those who were left with his sword and kill them, as he had made an attempt to do to Alexander McNett a few days before, who swam off on two wooden bottles, stopped up tight, but was discovered before he got to shore, and McDanolds came with his drawn sword and would have killed him had not Sergeant Perrigo prevented him). A man named Avery said: "Yes" pointing to me, "There is one." He said to me, "Did you know they were going?" I said, "Yes." He turned to the Sergeant and said: "Take that gentleman and put him in irons." The Sergeant said, "Oh, we have no crime against him, unless it was that he did not go when a door was opened for him. It is their duty to get away if they can, and ours to keep them." The alarm gun being fired, Captain McDanolds, commander of the fort on the other side, came over and wanted to see the place they went out. I took up the floor and showed him the place. He said: "No, mon, they ne'er went oot there. If you will creep through there I will give you a half Joe." I told him I did not like to be shut in. "Ha! ha! ha! upon my soul it was well played. The guard have done their duty, and it was their (the prisoners') duty to get away if they could. It is all right. Nobody to blame."

Not long after this some of the prisoners got a picket loose and several of them got outside the pickets. I do not recollect how many, but they were discovered before they had got off the island, and brought back again. As near as I can remember there were about ten. It was a very hazardous undertaking to go off on such slender floats. The water ran exceedingly swift on both sides of the island and the current would carry them down three miles before they could land, and then they must land on the Canada shore. It is a thing none would undertake but to regain their liberty. No one realizes the sweets of liberty but those who are deprived of it. (*See foot note.)

There were a number of prisoners who had made attempts to escape, confined in irons in the guard house, and having got new recruits, there was not room in the guard house for them all, neither had they irons to iron them singly. They were taken from the guard house and put into a barrack room, and they were about to iron them two and two. But previous to their doing it one of them called to his comrade and asked him to bring a tub in order to take their cloths to wash. A young fellow whose name was Knapp carryed the tub, by leave of the sentry. They got off their irons, put them in the bottom of the tub and put their shirts over them. Knapp carried the tub to his room, and when they came to take out the shirts they found the irons. Well, the next thing was to know what to do with them. An Irishman by the name of Brann-

NOTE:* In the month of August, 1927, the publisher hereof made the trip down the St. Lawrence river from Prescott, Province of Ontario, to Montreal, Quebec Province, on the Canadian Steamship Line's staunch little craft, Rapids Prince. This, with the twin boat, Rapids Princess, follows the river channel in one direction, only. Canal and locks along the northern shore take care of all other traffic.

Though the passenger trust implicitly in the steady hand and the clear brain of the specially trained pilot, the trip is filled with thrills. This is particularly true when he feels certain that the boat has actually bumped one of the big rocks which lie in the channel, or when the screw is working hard in an apparent effort to reach land, while the ship floats sidewise through the boiling waters. However we ing said: "Leave it to me. I know, brawley, what to do." He took the tub and went to the water gate, and asked the sentry leave to go to the river to wash his cloaths. He had leave to go, and as the sentry was walking from him he would fling a pare of irons into the river, and continued so to do until he had them all in the river.

Now to return to the prisoners. The Sergeant came with another man with him, with hammer, pincers and file, in order to take off their irons and iron them two and two. He told them to get up and have the irons off, for they had all lain down on the floor. "But, where are your irons? You got none on." They refused to tell him. He asked if the sentry had not assisted in making away with them. They told him no. He said it was impossible for them to make away with them without help. Thomas Hunter said: "You would give us no wood. It was a cold day, and we have burned them," and that was all the information he could get. They were then threatened to be loaded with irons as soon as they could be procured.

A few days later Captain Law, the commander of the prison, came on the island, ordered all the prisoners to parade, and made a speech to us, tell-pass the railroad draw bridge at Coteau du Lac in safety, and soon reach the quiet waters of the approach to Montreal.

In the midst of these lower rapids we pass a small group of forest studded, low-lying islands, around which the river runs "exceedingly swift," and it does look as if it would indeed be a "hazardous undertaking" to float away from the island in the manner described. No summer homes have been built here, and if traces remain of the old prison camp, they are probably never visited. I was told that the foundation of the fort mentioned was supposed to have been struck, in placing the piers for the railroad bridge, but could find no one at Montreal or at Ottawa who could state the exact location of the prison. Government Archives at Ottawa give names and dates of prisoners released from Coteau du Lac.

ing to make ourselves easy, for in a few days we should all be sent home. "If you breed no more riots," as he termed it, "upon my word of honour you shall all be released." We waited very impatiently for about a fortnight and no further news. We began to think we must winter on the island, and began to plaster our rooms, to secure ourselves against the inclemency of the weather.

RELEASE AND RETURN HOME

One evening at role call we saw Captain Law come onto the point of the island. Some of the prisoners observed they thought he was coming to give orders for us to go home. I told them I did not believe there was any such good news as that, and went in and sat down to my supper. Presently the Sergeant sang out for role call. I told my room mates I had answered to my name once, and that I was not agoing to leave my supper. They generally turned out, and in a few minutes I heard a loud huzzah, and they came running back into their rooms and said we were all to be released tomorrow morning. I could not really believe it til I saw the guards taken off and we had liberty to go where we pleased. Burnet, Norton and myself had the fourteen days' flour those men had drawn when they went out at the hole, which we had kept consealed, although it had been called for by the guard. We went to baking cakes and bread til late in the night. After we had baked our bread and prepared our victuals for our march, we laid down to take our rest, but a party came round and hauled all out of bed, and I do not think there was a wink of sleep that night. The next morning, being the 17th of October, 1782, we were taken off the island, it being two years from the time I was first taken. When we got over to the fort I drew a suite of cloaths. We then started for Montreal by land, and traveled on foot the first day. The next day we went on board of a boat down the river to Montreal, and on our way we went through a canal with three locks, which was the first that I ever saw. We then went on board a sloop and sailed down to Quebeck, and were put on board a ship of three hundred and three tons burden. After we were put on board ship we were not allowed to go on shore. I should have been very glad to have viewed the city but was not allowed the favour of satisfying my curiosity. All we could see was the lower town and the stupendous walls around the city. While we lay here I saw a press gang take a man and haul him into a boat in order to take him on board a man of war that lay in the harbor, and push off from the shore. But the man sprang into the water and got on shore before they could stop their boat so as to catch him, and I was pleased to see him get clear.

The 12th day of November we set sail from Quebeck, and on the second day there came on a snow storm and at night the wind blew a gale, so that they were obliged to heave to, lash the helm, and let her ride. The next day, having gotten into the bay of Shelore, the wind blew a most tremendous gale and, increasing at night, we had a most dreadful night of it. Just before day one of the prisoners, who was used to the seas went on deck and cried out, "Lord have mercy on us, we are all lost. Where is the watch?" They came to the hatchway and called out to the prisoners that if there were any of us that understood anything about a ship, for God's sake turn out, and none come on deck but sailors. The rest stay under deck, There happened to be among the prisoners a number of good seamen who turned out, and with much difficulty just cleared the Isle of Anticost. Perhaps one minute more would have been too late. If we had been cast on that desolate island in that inclement season we must all have perished. Such a time I never saw before. When they hoisted the main sail the ship rolled as though it was turning over. Some were praying and some swearing; some laughing and some crying. As the sun rose the wind all died away, but after such a wind storm there were great swells which made some most dreadfully sick; but I had not the least seasickness the whole voyage.

The fifteenth day after we left Quebeck we got into Boston harbor. It being Thanksgiving day, Governor Hancock would not attend to receipting the prisoners, and we very impatiently were obliged to stay on board two nights. After we came on shore we expected to draw some provisions, but Governor Hancock would allow none to those who were taken on their farms. So I set out to find my family and friends, without money or provisions. It was with the utmost difficulty that I could get liberty to stay in their houses or lodge by their fires.

I traveled from a little after sunset til between eight and nine o'clock before I could get in to stay. At length I went into a house where was a very decent young woman. I told her my situation, and wished to stay. She said there was a tavern just by. I told her a tavern was no better for me than a private house, for I had no money. She said: "That is bad enuf. The people of the house are gone, and I have no right to let you stay." She handed me a quarter of a dollar and said: "Go to the tavern and get a lodging. I feel sorry for those that are in your situation." I shall ever remember that young woman with gratitude, for by her means I had leave to stay at the next house I called at. Abijah Hutchinson was in company with me. We had supper here of bread and milk. The next morning we pursued our journey, traveled about three miles, and began to think it was time to try to get breakfast; but we found it was as difficult as it was to get entertainment. We caled at every house, and as often as we called we were denied, because we had no money. It had got to be near noon. We went into a tavern, asked for some victuals, and told him we had no money. We were denied. I endeavored to reason the case with him, but to no purpose. I turned about to go off. He saw a japanned quart cup tyed to my pack, and asked what I would take for it. I told him he might have it if he would give us some breakfast. He agreed he would. After we had eaten our breakfast I observed to Hutchinson that it was the first time I ever undertook to beg, and it should be the last, if I could sell my coat. The landlord asked what I would take for it. I told him I would take four dollars. He said that was too much, cloaths were very cheap in Boston. He would give me three. I told him he might have it. Hutchinson sold his coat also. After this we met with very little trouble. The farther we got from Boston the kinder the people were. But very few would take anything of us, especially after we got into Connecticut.

Hutchinson and I parted, and I came to Hebron on a Friday, to the house of Sylvester Phelps, a man that married my cousin, who received me very kindly, and made me stay with him til the next Tuesday in order to get me a pare of shoes, and then sent his son to carry me on horseback to Glastonbury, thirteen miles, where I had two uncles, viz: Amos Hollister and Elijah Hollister. I came to my uncle Elijah's first. I spoke to him and called him Uncle. He said: "Josiah, is it you? Are you yet alive? I never expected to see you again."

My uncles received me very affectionately. I stayed with them until Thursday, and then Uncle Elijah came to bring me home. We came as far as Plymouth. I saw Isaac Foot of Watertown. I inquired for William Andrews. He said he was moved to Litchfield. I asked if he knew anything about his daughter, whose husband was a prisoner. He said she was with her father and was almost gone with the consumption.

No one can imagine how this news struck me. The joys that I anticipated on meeting my wife and children was turned to grief.

We then shifted our course for Litchfield, arrived at Noah Garnsey's in the evening. My first inquiry was about my wife. They informed me that it was seven miles to where she lived. I was a mind to go that night, but they insisted that I should stay til morning, and they would go along with me. In the morning Brother Garnsey and his wife and my sister Naomi went with me to visit my wife. Before we came to her father's house Naomi went forward to let them know of my coming. When we arrived she met me at the dore, all pined away to nothing but skin and bones, but O, my feelings at that time I cannot express nor can anyone have the least idea unless they have experienced the same. She told me her time was come; that she must soon leave the world; that it had been her longing desire to see me before she left the world, and that she desired to unite with me to return public thanks to Almighty God that he had spared my life so that she might see my face once more in the land of the living. She informed me that she had renewed her covenant, made a public profession of religion, gave herself up to God, and that she had dedicated the dear children to God in baptism, and that she had taken what pains her weak state of health would allow, and had endeavored to impress their young and tender minds with a sense of their duty to love God, and of the worth of their precious and immortal souls, and that she must now commit them to my care, charging me at the same time to bring them up in the fear and admonition of the Lord. She said that she knew she had been a grate sinner, and that she had no goodness of her own, but she trusted alone in the merits of Christ for salvation.

She decayed by degrees til the 27th day of January, 1783, when perceiving she was failing fast, the neighbors were called in. She desired her children to be brought. She took them by the hand and looked very wishful on them, but could not speak, for speech had failed her. I then took her by the hand and asked her if her faith held out; if it did, to squeeze my hand. She answered by giving my hand a squeeze, and sweetly, as I trust, fell asleep in Jesus. It appeared that nothing could have supported me under this trying scene only a belief that my loss was her gain. She was very patient. I never heard her groan in all her sickness. Her parents and neighbors chide my grief, but I felt that I wanted they should feel with me. On the 29th her remains were decently interred. A sermon suitable to the occasion was delivered by the Reverend Mr. Chapman.

Following is the closing stanza of an attempt at poetical relation of his experience by Josiah Hollister:

“Thanks be to God, his name be prased,
He hath preserved me all my days.
Although he smote me with a rod,
Give me a heart to praise my God!”

SOME INTERESTING WEATHER RECORDS, recorded by Josiah Holister while a resident of Cattaraugus County, New York.

May 16th, 17th and 18th, 1816, a very hard frost, which extended to the State of Ohio, and cut off the fruite, both apples and peaches.

On the sixth day of June, 1816, a remarkable snow storm came between eight and nine o'clock in the morning. It snowed so that the air was thick with snow, and the night following was very cold, so that the water froze as thick as window glas.
The night of the 7th, continued to freeze, and very cold through the day. The night of the 8th a hard frost, and the 9th a frost, but not quite so hard.
The 29th, a very hard frost, that cut down the corn and injured the gardings. The 30th, a frost, but not so hard. The corn and gardings cut down and almost destroyed.

July 7th, a very heavy frost, and the night of the 8th, very cold, but a heavy fog in the morning, which took the frost off. A very hard frost which finished the corn and gardings—which froze the corn and garding fruite to the ground.

17th, at night very cold, and in the morning of the 18th a frost, but a fog came on and took it off, so that it did not injure things materially.

From the 15th of December, 1817, to the 6th of May, 1818 the snow fell twelve feet, measuring the snows as they fell, and a severe cold winter. The snow fell the fifth and sixth of May. It fell eight inches beside what thawed, and two feet at Canawango.

On the 18th day of May, 1819 it snowed very hard. The snow fell about a foot deep. The grass was about half leg high, the trees were leaved out and in full blossom, which gave a very singular appearance, which can hardly be imagined.

May 28th, 1820, the snow fell shoe deep.

The 16th and 17th of April, 1821 snow fell more than knee deep.

The weather very cold. Fodder very scarce.

APPENDIX—BEXTRACT FROM AN ADDRESS

By Walter Hodge Bunn at the Centennnial
Celebration of Cooperstown, New York,
Week of 4 August, 1907

Several members of the Bunn Family were pioneer settlers of Otsego County, New York, and, as their experiences are typical of those of pioneers everywhere, this extract is applicable to the pioneering efforts of other members of the Bunn Family in various localities.

"I am convinced that we cannot justly measure the acts and services of the pioneers of the County, without considering their educational, social and political situation, and their facilities for moral, business or political advancement. We must consider the diversity of the people, their varying habits, tastes, activities, characteristics mental and physical, their struggles, intense and earnest, with nature and with each other, their changing conditions, the means by which the same were sought or wrought; even their reverses or their successes become necessarily part of the history of the times, to be taken into account indetermining and measuring the value of their services to their fellow men.

Neither the time allotted to me nor your patience will allow me to depict even briefly the manifold social, industrial, and educational disadvantages under which the pioneer of 1791 lived. They were many and grievous, but he was earnest, enthusiastic, brimming over with life, energy and confidence.

The pioneer settlers of this County appear to have come mainly from New England, more largely from Connecticut than from any other state, and from Columbia and Westchester Counties. Montgomery, Oneida, Herkimer and even as far west as Ontario were being rapidly peopled with these hardy and thirsty pioneers, who left the comparatively sterile soil of New England for the cheaper and far more fertile lands available in the Mohawk Valley and in this County. Lands were offered cheaper here and upon better terms than they could be obtained upon the Mohawk, and here there was room for all in Nature's primeval wilderness. A capable and industrious farmer could obtain hundreds of acres at a nominal cost if he could by settlement draw a colony after him. Here was the new El Dorado, the soil was fertile, springs abundant, timber of first quality, and the Charlotte, Schenevus, and Susquehanna would float rafts to the lower Susquehanna and the seaboard.

The humble cabin built and home established, granted health and industrious habits, the way was clear. It was indeed for the early years a lonely and rough life, with little of social comfort and relaxation beyond what the secluded family might find in the society of each other; but the pioneer fathers had strong arms, iron frames; they were devoted to their families, their homes, their work; there was little of elegance or polish in life, work, or manners. They were contented yet ambitious, they looked for the rising of the sun on the morrow, they sought comforts rather than luxury. Their wives were equally brave hearted, industrious and hopeful, and were devoted to their domestic duties, working with hand, heart and brain for the comfort of husband and bairns—the source of the sterling virtues of both was their devotion to their homes. This made them earnest in business, and family affection and pride was a powerful incentive to individual virtue, and to honorable success. Every man had a reputation to make or keep. There were no drones or idlers. The pioneer had unbounded confidence in the future of the Republic he had assisted in establishing. He was proud of his own people, of the marvelous immigration already settling on our shores, of our expansive area, the immensity of which he did not realize, even imagine. National pride and patriotic fervor made him boastful. He was aggressive and "our country, right or wrong," was his motto. He was courageous and hopeful, he had but little learning of the schools, but he had good sound sense, was direct and practical, and could express himself clearly, fluently and forcibly upon all matters within the range of personal experience, and could prove his doctrine Orthodox by "Apostolic blows and knocks," if occasion demanded. He was not quarrelsome, but was tenacious of his rights and not afraid to assert or defend them; he had no reverence for old titles, estates or homes; he was ready for any trade which would better the condition of his family; he was hospitable, a good neighbor, a helpful, sympathetic, openhearted and generous friend in the hour of sickness and trouble. He looked ahead, planned for the morrow, for next year. Each succeeding season more acres were cleared and planted; the crop of Indian corn was supplemented with rye, wheat, oats and tobacco. Orchards were started, and kitchen gardens established; the stock of cattle and herds increased. He no longer feels anxiety for the future of his rapidly increasing family. The success of the colony brings others hither, neighbors draw more closely, grist and saw-mills are set up, farm houses built, with plastered walls, and windows of glass; taverns multiply, black-smiths and artisans find here a field for remunerative labor; stores are established and the comforts of the home are increased. Religious societies are organized and stated preaching secured; school houses are multiplied although no system of public instruction was adopted by the State until as late as 1795, and then only for a term of five years, at the expiration of which the appropriation or maintenance therefor was not renewed for several years, so that the expense of education fell mainly upon the communities in which schools were maintained.

It seems to me that the pioneers whose hardships and privations, whose toils and hazardous achievements, whose unfailing faith and unabated ardor brought for themselves and for their families individual success, and assisted in the upbuilding of the several townships, and of the county with which their fortunes were identified, are each entitled to be classified as men of note."

APPENDIX—CREAD AT AN ENTERTAINMENT AT THE CLOSE OF SCHOOL IN THE RICHARDSON
DISTRICT, ONEONTA, IN THE WINTER OF 1876

By S. Howard Sherman

In this Centennial year, when our greatness as a nation is the pride of every patriot's heart, when we love to dwell upon and boast of the men and minds, the struggles and achievements that have contributed to this end, it seems eminently proper that we take a local retrospect; that we go back in thought and study, as we sometimes love to do, fifty or seventy-five, or a hundred years, to the scenes and times of our fathers and grandfathers; and surely as we are brought face to face with the difficulties which they encountered, their heroic struggles that the wilderness might blossom as the rose, and that they might transmit to oncoming generations a goodly heritage, we may well be proud of the stock from which we are descended.

It is this feeling, my friends, that has led me to pry into and note down a few facts with the early history of this immediate vicinity, and the task has been a very pleasant one, although not a little difficult, so few remain to point out the spot where stood the cabin of seventy-five years ago, and soon, very soon, they will be gathered to their fathers, a few loved ones will cherish their memory and bear their likeness in his bosom, while time is steadily and relentlessly removing all traces of their deeds achieved by valor and sacrifice.

"Seventy-five years ago the first settlement was made on what is now Richardson Hill. Amasa Grover and Nathan Bridges came from Massachusetts and settled on lands now owned by Lyman

Bridges and Mr. McLeland. The venerable, honest and genial Horace Grover remains of the one family, and your jolly, round-favored, fun-loving neighbor Lyman Bridges of the other to tell of the scenes and incidents of long ago.

About the same time David Griswold and Gideon Babcock, from Rhode Island, settled in lands now occupied by Nathan Babcock and W. Ackley, Josiah Peet, with his two sons Bears and Isaac, had made a little settlement farther South, and the children of those two sturdy sons are contributors to this entertainment to-night. It is of the schools of the past that we have confined our inquiries, and it is of schools, common schools, that we love to talk, and it is with pride that we refer to the fact that one of the first questions that these hardy pioneers proceeded to solve practically was, "What shall we do for the rising generation?" In the early settlement of the country there were no laws providing for common schools, no tax levied nor funds provided for the establishment or maintenance of schools, hence all funds for this purpose must be raised by voluntary contributions of citizens immediately interested.

I have been pointed to the spot where stood the first school house, erected in less than six years after the first settlement, on this Hill. It stood near where the home of Mrs. Harriet Brightman now is. In describing this pioneer cabin school house, if any of its belongings were more modern than here noted it was the exception and not the rule of school houses of its time. It was 20x16 feet, and 7 or 8 feet high, built of round logs in perfect log-cabin style. It was covered with boards split out of logs of oak or chestnut, about 3 ft. long, from 8 to 12 inches wide, and about 1 inch thick. To stop the crevices between the logs pieces of wood were driven in, called chincking, and over this a sort of clay mortar was spread inside and out.

The floors were made of timbers called puncheon split out of oak or chestnut trees about 4 inches thick. The door was made of this same puncheon, though not so thick, it was hung on creaking wooden hinges, and fastened on the inside with a clumsy wooden latch made of strong hickory, a leather string was fastened to the latch on the inside and thrust through a hole in the door. By pulling on the string the rude latch was raised.

As stoves were unknown in those days a fireplace was used instead. This was made by cutting a place in the end of the building opposite the door, about 6 ft. square. Connecting with this on the outside the chimney was built of stone and mortar.

The seats were made of slabs, into which holes were bored, and strong hickory sticks driven for legs. These were arranged on the two sides of the room extending the entire length in two rows. Against the wall was fastened a rude desk for the use of the larger and more advanced scholars. These sat with their backs to the teacher, the same as our more modern, but not much improved house of the present day.

They wrote with pens made of the quills of geese or turkeys, and ink made of soft maple bark steeped in copperas. A little maple syrup was put in to give a gloss to the writing. Ink made of whiskey would not freeze in the coldest weather.

Building a fire in Winter was no small item. Usually a young man was appointed over night to build the fire next morning. A huge back log was carried into the house. A nice bed made in the ashes and the great log trundled into place; two good sized stones served as andirons, and a fore stick was laid on these and the odds and ends of yesterday's fire laid between. Then if no live coals remained the builder must hustle to the nearest house and bring a brand or coals.

I have had related to me a contrast between one of those early teachers and his patrons; in it the young man pledged himself to teach six hours a day and twenty-six days for a month, to keep strict order during school hours, and to receive for compensation $7 per month and be boarded among the scholars. He had to take his pay in wheat at 50c a bushel, or rice at 25c per bushel delivered at the still.

Men have come out from that lowly cabin school house and others of its like to be potent factors in the development of the vast and varied civilization of our great nation, with all its splendor of wealth and power, and art and education, and law and religion. They were made strong and manly by the difficulties they surmounted and the obstacles they smoothed away.

Would you visit that school of sixty years ago? Come with me and behold a motley assembly. The teacher welcomes us at the door; he is sharp featured, tall and angular; a typical Yankee; is evidently short sighted as he wears spectacles, and they are fastened to his nose by a leather string around the back of his head tied to the bows.

He has a Columbian speller in one hand and a long switch in the other. The former attracts his attention, while the latter attracts the attention of unruly scholars. A father has just entered, leading his little son by the hand. It is his first entrance into a new life, as it were. The teacher smiles upon the new-comer, lifts the knit cap from a high, broad forehead, strokes his brown curls, and tells him he will one day be a man. "Now, sit here and be a good boy and study your spelling book." With his eyes upon the page of Webster's speller what a feeling of loneliness comes over his young heart as he hears the creaking door and knows that his father has gone out and left him, as it were, in a new world. Perhaps that father, as he took the path through the woods, hazel brush, and stump lot, to his lowly home dreamed of a future for his little son. Maybe he hoped and prayed that the adverse circumstances which had held down his own aspirations might not be his to encounter. Perhaps he hoped that his son might so honor some profession that men should recognize his ability and be better because he had been born.

Be that as it may, we know that the prophecy of that teacher was fulfilled. That he did become a man,—that men did clothe him with their praise. In less than 25 years after he was lifted upon that high bench in that cabin school house, he was elected to Congress, afterward became a Judge of the Supreme Court, and then of the Court of Appeals, and died covered with honors. This is no fiction. His name was Martin Grover. He was born in the house now owned by Mr. Taylor. His youth was spent upon this hill. He attended school in that log school house, and his kindred are here to-night.

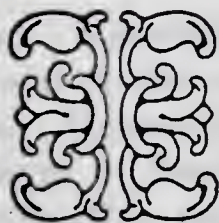

As years passed, and the ever-flowing tide of emigration was making this wilderness to blossom as the rose, laws were passed for the better establishment and support of common schools. Towns were divided into school districts, and this was district No. 17 of the town of Milford.

On the first day of April, 1822, Mr. William Richardson, perhaps being the most prominent resident, was notified by two Commissioners, Ezra Adams and Levi Stewart, to warn the freeholders and inhabitants in the above named District who are qualified to vote at town meeting to meet at his house on the 7th day of May next at 3 o'clock in the afternoon for the purpose of electing officers and making rules and regulations as are required by law. Agreeable to this call the first school meeting was held in this district. William Richardson, Bears Peet and David Griswold were elected Trustees, Eliab Griswold, Clerk, and Henry Gifford, Collector. At this first meeting it was voted to build a new frame school house, and the contract was awarded to Wm. Richardson. In it the said Richardson agrees to build the said school house 18 x 22 ft. suitable for school purposes, and to have it completed by the first day of December, 1822. And the said District agreed to pay to the said Richardson $50, $15 in cash, and $35 in grain delivered at the still. And the said Richardson is to pay $10 of the $35 as his share.

The first teacher employed by these new Trustees was for the Summer of 1822 before the new school house was completed. She taught in an old shop, or milk room, near where Mr. Terry now lives. I some years afterward became acquainted with this new teacher in this new district. I remember long ago a pair of soft, loving eyes that looked fondly into mine. I can remember a soft hand that could sooth every pain; a fond heart that could sympathize with every childish sorrow. I remember a presence that made my home what it can never be again, though around the hearth-stone cluster faces that are as dear as earthly ties can make them. That one was my Mother. See No. 48.) Her form sleeps in the beautiful valley of the Susquehanna, and her hand is with the holy evangelists. She has gone to meet many of her patrons and pulpits whose kindness she loved to speak of to her children. From her I had learned of the Richardsons and Peets and Bridges and Brightmans and Grovers and Griswolds long before I came among you, and I am here in my own behalf to express my appreciation of the good cheer and hospitality that have found expression in your homes and the many kindnesses that have made my stay among you very pleasant. (See No. 83.)

ADDENDA

James Bronson Conant, A. B., M. D., F. A. C. S., junior son of Rev. Charles Albion Conant, was born 31 March 1870 at Genoa, New York; he attended the public schools, Amsterdam Academy and Greylock Institute; in 1893 he received the degree of A. B. from Williams College, and in 1896 the degree of M. D. from Columbia University; in 1914 he pursued a post graduate course at Vienna, Austria. In 1897, at the age of 27 years, he began practice as physician and surgeon at Amsterdam, New York, where he has continued with gratifying success. There he purchased and rebuilt his home; is a deacon of the Presbyterian Church of that city, is a Republican, and identified with many medical associations as well as social and fraternal bodies; is a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, fellow American Medical Association, member New York State Medical Society, Montgomery Medical Society, ex-president of staff of Amsterdam Hospital, member of staff of St. Mary's Hosiptal, of the Masonic order and is vice president of Capitol District Medical Golf Association. He married 30 August 1904 at Amsterdam Mary Jane Fritsch, daughter of Rev. George W. Fritsch, pastor of the German Evangelical Lutheran Church of Amsterdam, who was born in Berks County, Pennsylvania, and died in 1920. His wife, Susan Shields, is a native of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Conant is an accomplished vocal and instrumental musician and radio artist. Children:

- i James Shields Conant, born 7 August 1906, is a student at Yale Medical College, New Haven
- ii Roger Conant, born 13 December 1907, is a student at Union College, Schenectady
- iii Eugene Fritsch Conant, born 29 August 1909, student at Union College
- iv Suzanne Viola Conant, born 20 October 1912
- v Betsey Drury Conant, born 18 November 1914
- vi Harriet Lavinia Conant, born 9 April 1918

247

Murray Elmo Bunn, youngest child of Edwin Murray Bunn and Kate D. Elder, his wife, was born 25 July 1880 in Mansfield, Cattaraugus County, New York. At the age of 21 years he engaged in general merchantile business at Little Valley, New York, not far from his native home, in the same county, where he continued ten years. In 1911 he moved to Oregon City, Oregon, where he has continued in the retail grocery business to the present time, and purchased a home in 1920. He married 28 June 1903 at Little Valley Paulette Marr Brown, daughter of George A. and Jennie Alice Brown. No Issue.
